State Dept. Inquiry Ends; Fight Looms Over Report

Taft, Wherry Give Signal for Senate Attack on Democrat Majority's Summary

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senate Republicans appeared yesterday to be making ready a fight against the Democratic subcommittee report that labeled the campaign of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) a "fraud and a hoax."

At the same time, however, it looked as if the Senate might be willing to end its long investigation of McCarthy's charges of Communist infestation of the State Department.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously to discharge its subcommittee that had been assigned the inquiry.

After a meeting of the Republican Policy Committee late yesterday, Senator Taft (Ohio) denounced the majority report as "purely political" and an insult to a member of the Senate. The policy chairman said he reflected the views of most committee members.

Taft also said the subcommittee "failed completely" to investigate McCarthy's charges and that the Republicans would raise that objection when an effort is made to file the report.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the subcommittee that has produced the most scathing denunciation of a Senator in recent congressional history, arose yesterday on the Senate floor to file the report. At once, Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), the minority leader, asked him to agree to postpone action for 24 hours.

The reason, Wherry argued, was that some Senators wanted a chance to look through the 350,000-word document, now in the form of a subcommittee print, before it became a public Senate document.

After considerable argument, Tydings agreed to the postponement. Presumably, he will move to file the report today. All indications were that at that time,

'Witchcraft Plot' Against President Holds 3 in Panama

Panama, Republic of Panama, July 18 (U.P.).—Three persons were being held today by the Panama secret police on charges of practicing witchcraft against the president of the republic.

The "witchcraft" prisoners are Fernando Cordoba, 60-year-old Colombian carpenter; Mrs. Amalia Herrera, 50, and Pedro Pablo Herrera, 33, a national police agent.

The mayor of Panama City charged the object of their black magic was to bring about the death of President Arias and the formation of a new government junta composed of Henrique de Obarrio, the present comptroller general; former President Enrique Jimenez, and Col. Jose Remon, head of the national police.

In Overpopulation

'Abstinence' Order Hinted By Church

Rome, July 18 (NYHT).—The Roman Catholic Church will urge virginity and partial or total sexual abstinence inside marriage if overpopulation becomes a worldwide problem, La Civilta Cattolica, authoritative Catholic publication indicates in its current issue.

It is the latest of a series of indications that Catholic leaders are concerned by reports of increasing overpopulation and by proposals that artificial birth control be used as a remedy in Japan and other crowded areas.

The article indicated the church means to maintain its opposition to contraception on the ground it is "marital fraud." It inferred, however, that Catholic theologians feel that the ancient Biblical order to mankind to "multiply and fill the earth" does not forbid "prudent

Housebreaking Rash Spreads To Alexandria

Phantom Burglar Enters 13 Additional Homes in Nearby Va.

A fast-working housebreaker broadened his activities to include Alexandria yesterday as 13 homes were ransacked in nearby Virginia, only 5 miles from the area where 25 homes were robbed Monday.

Seven of the new series of thefts were in Arna Valley, Arlington, and six were just across the line in Alexandria, in an apartment project at Tennessee ave. and Manor rd.

Arlington police received their first report of a housebreaking at 5:15 p. m. Within an hour they had received a total of seven complaints from apartment dwellers at 2418 and 2422 S. 27th st. and 2723 S. Glebe rd.

County Police Lieut. W. Lynn Smith said he only hoped the evening would not "bring a repitition of last night." He said police were convinced that the housebreaker yesterday is the same man who committed the housebreakings Monday, when apartments in Colonial Village, Rosslyn and Lee Gardens were entered.

Smith said his men "are going to use every method we can to apprehend" the elusive thief, although no clews had been reported early last night.

With every detective on the force assigned to the wholesale housebreakings, Lieutenant Smith said even uniformed policemen now are being ordered into plain clothes and stationed in apartment areas in an attempt to trap the culprit.

Yesterday's crop of housebreakings followed exactly the same pattern as those reported Monday, Smith said. In each case, cash and jewelry were taken. The Arlington police lieutenant said he had not received a report on

Loot May Blow Up In Thieves' Faces

More than a ton of dynamite was stolen over the weekend at the Dynamite Rock Quarry, Chatham, Va., Virginia State Police reported yesterday.

Police fear the thieves may get a surprise if they try to use the explosive. They also took 1000 detonation caps which are used only for under-water blasting. Only four or five persons in the entire State know how to use the caps safely, police added.

Civil Service May Admit Thousands

Temporary and War Service Employes Would Be Eligible for Permanent Status

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Civil Service Commission has become the chief advocate of a plan to blanket thousands of war service and temporary employes with good work records into permanent jobs by executive order.

As discussed by the commission, all remaining war service people as well as thousands of temporaries appointed in 1946 and 1947 would be eligible for permanent status. No decision has been made on a cut-off date, a date after which appointees wouldn't be considered for status.

For Duration and 6 Months

In addition, it's clearly possible that if such an order is issued and if the Korean war worsens, the commission will stop making permanent appointments for the duration. In that event, all persons given Federal jobs would be temporary indefinite appointees whose work would be good for the duration and six months. The war agencies already have been given the authority to make the temporary appointments.

Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, is determined to keep permanent appointments to a minimum if a big expansion of Government becomes necessary. He says many of the wartime appointees will have to be laid off eventually and to give them status would lead to too many complications.

On the other hand, there are those Federal officials who argue that the Government faces a tight labor market, and that it will be far more difficult to recruit for temporary war jobs than it would be if the jobs would lead to permanent status. Besides, they say, many of the non-defense agencies may have to lay off employes, and it wouldn't be practical to stop permanent appointments for what comparatively few would make.

A general covering-in order to clean up the war service appointees has been debated for

Four New Polio Cases Reported; Area Total 40

Four new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in the Washington area yesterday, bringing the total for the year to 40.

Three of the victims are District residents, raising the city's 1950 total to 22 cases, as against six at this time last year. The new local cases were described by the District Health Department as follows:

A 22-year-old woman, 6300 block 16th st. nw., admitted to George Washington University Hospital July 13; a 4½-year-old boy, 4100 block Tunlaw ter. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital July 17; and a 7-year-old boy, 2600 block Southern ave. se., admitted to Children's Hospital July 15.

The fourth case, reported by the Montgomery County Health Department, was a 3½-year-old boy, 9300 block Milroy pl., Bethesda, Md., admitted to Children's Hospital July 15. This made three cases reported in the county this year.

President Acts to Curb Building

Lifting of Ceilings On Armed Forces, $5 to $6 Billion, Reported Goals

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman took action yesterday to hold down the home-building boom, as he prepared to lay before Congress today a program to deal with the Korean fighting and the world crisis in general.

He ordered Federal agencies to impose credit restraints in the field of housing, to limit new public housing, and to take other steps to head off rising building costs and to make materials available for the armed forces.

As a result of international developments, Mr. Truman said, "many materials used in residential and other construction will be required in increasing amounts for national defense purposes." And it was imperative, he added, that these requirements be met "fully and without delay."

He announced these moves just before he held an extraordinary two-hour conference with the Cabinet to go over the 6000-word draft of his message to Congress.

Up until a late hour, the Chief Executive had not made up his mind how much money to ask of Congress for the armed forces. The figure of five billion dollars or six billion dollars was being talked about, but the space for the actual amount was blank in the rough draft of the message.

The Chief Executive, besides asking for money, will recommend that Congress take the ceiling off the number of men that the Army, Navy and Air Force may enroll.

He will announce that he has authorized Secretary of Defense Johnson to call out the National Guard and Reserves.

He will ask for power to allocate vital materials in short supply, but is not expected to recommend increased taxes, food rationing or consumer credit controls at this time.

Mr. Truman's message to Congress, as well as his broadcast to the Nation at 10:30 o'clock tonight, probably will be forthright but not swashbuckling. He will emphasize, however, that Korea is only part of a tremendous Communist pattern of conquest, and he will chart a course of action to meet that threat to the free world.

It was reported in the business community that the President's message to Congress will contain a two-point recommendation with respect to strategic materials: First, power to ration such materials on a voluntary basis, and second, standby controls for compulsory rationing if it should become necessary.

It was reported, also, that Mr. Truman had in mind a super agency to handle production, priorities, rationing, price-fixing and the like if the situation should call for it.

The President's action in the housing field was his first move to prepare the Nation for what lies

Fight Begun On Forced Controls

By Robert C. Albright

Congress yesterday broke out in a rash of proposals for a minimum preparedness program ranging all the way from "around the clock" industrial production to increased taxes and limited controls on the civilian economy.

Speeches and statements in anticipation of President Truman's message to Congress today varied widely on the steps to be taken but uniformly pledged support of all measures "really essential to the national security."

A cautious warning against immediate imposition of compulsory controls was sounded, however, by Senate GOP Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) and House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.).

In a joint statement, they urged

U. S. to Unload Cotton Stocks As Price Curb

4,320,000 Bales Put Into Market; Some Goods in Slight Drop

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam made use yesterday of the farm price support machinery—long blamed for maintaining high commodity prices—to stop the runaway market in cotton.

Ralph S. Trigg, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, jumped into the boiling cotton market with an announcement that CCC has 4,320,000 bales of cotton on hand which it will sell to stabilize the market. This is about one-third the normal annual U. S. consumption of cotton.

Government observers last night predicted the action will have an effect of halting wild price gyrations in other commodities that have stirred the country in the last week.

Although Trigg's announcement was delayed until after the close of the market at 3 p. m., it, or some similar action, apparently was foreseen by market traders. During the day cotton turned abruptly from its skyrocketing upward movement and dropped as much as $10 a bale—the limit permitted by exchange regulations for one day. Later it recovered to close $5.50 to $7.40 a bale lower. Other commodities, such as soybeans, followed it down

The day was marked by confused price movements. A long list of commodities tumbled abruptly with cotton. A list almost as long continued climbing.

The stock market staged its strongest comeback since prices crumbled at the start of the Korean fighting. Rail, steel and automobile stocks powered the advance. Closing prices were up a few cents to a top of $3 a share, most issues closing at the day's highest levels.

Wall Street credited better news from the fighting front for the turnabout. Similarly, however, commodity dealers credited the improved reports from Asia with sending many items down. Here in a nutshell, is what happened:

Battered Foe Having Hard Time Getting Tanks Across Kum To Resume Attack

Bulletin

Tokyo, Wednesday, July 19 (U.P.).—North Korean planes today bombed the airport at Taejon which remained in American hands after the Communist ground forces halted their drive on the city.

Eight planes raided the airfield and the railroad leading south from the city without causing appreciable damage.

A front dispatch from United Press Correspondent Robert Miller also reported that artillery shells landed in the vicinity of the airport at 10 a.m., indicating the enemy may have brought some big guns across the Kum River during the night.

The only ground fighting in the area was a patrol clash north of Taejon. Miller reported that five North Koreans were killed in the lone patrol action.

In his afternoon communique, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced that the American lines in the vicinity of Taejon remained "unchanged" since yesterday. He also reported some patrol action.

The planes raiding the Taejon airfield also dropped leaflets bearing the alleged pictures and statements of American prisoners held by North Koreans.

One statement attributed to a captain called on his friends in the Twenty-Fourth Division to "oppose American intervention" in the Korean war.

Tokyo (Wednesday), July 19 (AP).—Heavily punished from the air and bloodied by the outmanned American ground defense, the Red invasion of South Korea virtually was at a full stop today.

How long the lull might last, no one could say. Not since Monday night had any major enemy activity been reported.

The Americans still stood just north and west of Taejon.

The entire front was so quiet that General MacArthur did not issue his usual early-morning communique. His press officer said American patrols were meeting

Acheson Selected For Annual Award Of Freedom House

New York, July 18 (AP).—Secretary of State Dean Acheson will receive the 1950 Freedom Award for his "valiant and constructive voice leading the democratic world toward unity against tyranny."

The award was announced by Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War and president of Freedom House, and Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the committee for the organization's ninth anniversary dinner. The organization devotes itself to the cause of world freedom.

Acheson will appear in person to receive the bronze plaque at the dinner on October 8.

Patterson and Swope said the award was "a unanimous bipartisan decision by leading Republican and Democratic spokesmen on our board, expressing the unity of democratic forces in America behind the leadership of our Secretary of State."

Korean War Supply Task A Nightmare

Held Greater Than Any In 1941-45; Tonnages, Distances Are Terrific

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Fighting the Korean war is a military supply nightmare—probably greater than anything we faced in World War II.

That was the picture given yesterday at a Pentagon briefing by a top-ranking Army General Staff officer whose job is logistics. Spelling out the tremendous difficulties of distance, huge tonnages involved and lack of roads, ports and materials available in Korea, he made it evident that the required build-up is only beginning.

This first official appraisal of the task ahead pointed up that virtually all of what we need in Korea—and that means everything from guns to filtration plants to planking to restore bridges—must come from outside. Most of it will have to come 5000 miles across the Pacific.

It means that an absolute minimum of a month and a half must elapse between the time an Army unit is alerted at its home base in the States and the day it finishes unloading at the Korean port of Pusan.

Must Figure 120 Days Ahead

Except for emergency items moved by air, it means that Army commanders in Korea must anticipate their needs by 120 days. It will take that long to get supplies already available in the United States shipped out.

To reporters hearing the explanation of the logistics problems involved, it meant a long war.

Of all the difficulties ahead, however, none was more sobering than that outlined as being faced by Army medical men.

The Army general said that almost none of the water in Korea is safe to drink without treating. And observing that soldiers have to fight in rice paddies, he noted that "the filth of the ages has been poured into these fields to make

Ships Outrun Typhoon, Get Beachhead Unopposed

1st Cavalry Force Put on Southeast Coast With Reds 30 Miles Distant

By Homer Bigart
NYHT News Service

A Korean Beachhead, July 18.—In the first amphibious assault landing since World War II, reinforcements came safely ashore this morning at a port in southeast Korea, to bring relief to hard-pressed and depleted American forces. They moved seven miles inland at once.

It was the first cheering news since the Americans began their long retreat down the Korean peninsula two weeks ago.

The troops landed were from the First Cavalry Division, liberators of Manila, now under the command of Maj. Gen. Hobart R. Gay.

The landing was unopposed. This was fortunate, for the scratch team hastily assembled by Rear Admiral J. H. Doyle was clearly in no condition for a sharply-contested beachhead.

It was a shoestring operation, unlike anything since Guadalcanal. Normally such an operation would require three months' planning. This show was thrown together in 10 days.

Plans were necessarily haphazard. Only two of the ships assembled were adequately prepared for amphibious landings. The others would have to rely on untrained boat crews. Under the circumstances, it was miraculous that all but a few units managed to rendezvous yesterday off the Japanese coast and steam toward Korea.

Plenty of air cover and gun power was available from the Seventh Fleet. Intelligence reports indicated, however, that the North Korean Communist forces had not yet reached the beachhead area in their sweep down the peninsula. In fact, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that a small American unit operating on the east coast had pulled a successful counter-attack, dislodging Commu-

West Berlin Nabs 1000 in Communist Propaganda Push

Berlin, July 18 (U.P.).—Nearly 1000 Communists were arrested in Western Berlin tonight for defying a ban against distributing propaganda proposing the outlawing of the atom bomb.

German police said 560 were arrested in the American sector, 250 in the British and 192 in the French.

Petitions and pamphlets were confiscated and police said the Communists were being released in small groups throughout the night.

Police reinforcements moved in to preserve order because citizens threatened to beat up the Reds.

No serious incidents were reported, but in Zehlendorf, in the U. S. sector, 500 German residents heaved rocks at the Communists as they were loaded into police cars.

The arrests came after British authorities erroneously issued a license permitting Communists to distribute antibomb leaflets.

'Othello' Drove Her From Home

Wife Badgered With the Bard; Md. Court Upholds Her Divorce

Annapolis, Md., July 18 (AP).—When he read her the murder scene from "Othello," he sounded as though he meant it.

So said Mrs. Joyce Hornstein, and Maryland's highest court today upheld her divorce from Bernard Hornstein, Navy Department employe.

Mrs. Hornstein left home at once—when he read how the jealous Moor smothers Desdemona with a pillow.

"That is exactly how I am going to do it," she said he told her.

The Court of Appeals had this to say:

"Even if he never intended to carry out such a threat, he may have made it in the hope that she would take it seriously enough to give him plausible ground for charging desertion."

Mrs. Hornstein charged that as they sat in their cozy living room at Capitol Heights, Md., he came to the death scene from "Othello."

This tells how Desdemona pleads, "O banish me, my lord, but kill me not," but Othello says, "Thou art to die."

Mrs. Hornstein said her husband's voice grew menacing.

"He said: 'Come over here, Joyce,' taking me to the window, 'you see how it is getting dark,' and he said: 'I mind very much throwing people out. If you don't go I will kill you.'"

She left home the same night.

After This Summer

Slim Attendance Threatens To End Watergate Concerts

Possibility that the Watergate concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra will be discontinued after this summer unless attendance improves was voiced yesterday by an orchestra spokesman.

Declaring that the organization faces "a sizable deficit," symphony headquarters urged the Washington public to show its loyalty by attendance if the concerts are to remain a feature of the Washington summer.

Attendance in the 7000-seat Watergate has dropped as low as 500, the spokesman said. He added:

"If people don't shown an interest in the music, there's no reason to continue the summer concerts."

A special plea for support was issued by Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the orchestra's administration committee.

This summer's concerts, underwritten for $20,000 by the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, have had an unusual run of bad-weather luck.

"It just seems that every concert night at 8 o'clock it has started raining," the orchestra spokesman reflected mournfully.

Said a public appeal:

"While one cannot sit down at the Watergate concert in the rain, one can attend and also call the Watergate series to the attention of friends when the weather is clear. A record attendance as in other years can partially wipe out the large deficit which they face, and thus save the Watergate series for future years."

The orchestra this summer, the appeal said, "has been able to plan the most unusual summer series of its history."

Whatever the future fate of the Watergate concerts may be, the current series will go on. Five concerts remaining are: tonight, "British Night"; Friday, "Italian Opera Night"; Sunday, "All Washington Night"; July 26, All-Gershwin Memorial," and July 28, John Charles Thomas, baritone.

'Officers,' Spokesman Here Says

Russians Serve as Advisers With Red Soldiers in Korea

The United States now has "definite information" that Russian military advisers are aiding North Korean troops in their onslaught on South Korea, a military spokesman said yesterday.

It was the first official confirmation that Russians are taking part in the war as advisers to their Communist puppets. The Soviet Union has disclaimed all responsibility for the invasion and has asserted it will not interfere.

The United Press reported last week that there were 15 Russian colonels with each division.

"We now have definite information that there are Russian advisers with North Korean troops," the military spokesman said. "The number with a certain unit is between 10 and 20."

"They're officers," he added, refusing to give further details.

"I'm sure you can see why we have to be very careful about what we say," he said.

He made the statement at a 3 p. m. briefing. No change was reported in the military situation, which has given military leaders here new hope. Earlier, a spokesman said American and South Korean forces "are holding all along the line and the pressure has slackened."

He said the North Koreans have suffered "very heavy casualties and their supply lines have been messed up."

Britain Is Reported Studying Joint Force

'Cease Fire First'

U.S. Rejects Nehru's Plan To Halt War

By the United Press

The United States rejected the Korean peace proposal of Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru yesterday and said any diplomatic move to end the war must be preceded by a Communist cease-fire order.

In a polite but firm note, Secretary of State Dean Acheson told Nehru this country cannot agree to any peace formula which includes as a condition the seating of the Chinese Communists in the United Nations.

Nehru in notes to Acheson and Soviet Prime Minister Josef Stalin had proposed settling the conflict within the framework of the U. N. Security Council with Red China replacing Nationalist China. Stalin agreed.

(A dispatch from London said Great Britain had joined the United States in declaring that a Communist cease-fire and withdrawel to the thirty-eighth parallel were "rock bottom" terms for ending the Korean war.

(Prime Minister Clement Attlee made the British position clear in the House of Commons under questioning by former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

(In Paris, officials sources said France also holds that Communist withdrawal to the thirty-eighth parallel is the first condition to restoring peace in Korea.)

Acheson's note was delivered to the Indian Ambassador here and in New Delhi. Officials said the differences in time between Washington and New Delhi was holding up its release to newsmen. Diplomatic informants said, however, that Acheson made these points:

1. The United States is deeply interested in seeking an end to the Korean fighting.

2. The United Nations has demanded a Communist ease-fire, withdrawal to the 38th Parallel and restoration of peace and security in the area. This is the United States position for action prior to any negotiations.

3. The United Nations must be supported in its efforts to halt aggression or the fate of other small nations who are attacked by aggressors would be in grave doubt.

American informants said Nehru's proposal, in effect, would seat Communist China in the United Nations as a result of North Korea's attack on South Korea. These informants said the American position is that aggression cannot be approved as a wedge to seat any nation in the U. N.

London, July 18 (U.P.).—Britain was reported today to be considering a plan to send ground troops to South Korea, either jointly with the five Western European Union powers or as part of a combined Commonwealth force.

French Gen. De Lattre de Tassigny, commander of land forces for the five western European treaty states (Britain, France, Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg) is in London now.

De Tassigny arrived yesterday for two days of talks with British defense chiefs. Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell was to fly to Paris Wednesday to meet with Western European Defense Ministers.

Before leaving, Shinwell was expected to confer with Australian Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies.

Officially, there was no positive information on yesterday's Cabinet meeting on United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie's appeal for reinforcements in Korea.

But War Minister John Strachey said in Commons today that draftees (national service men) must continue to be sent abroad to meet Britain's military commitments.

There seemed to be no doubt that Lie's formal request has altered Britain's attitude. Until now, Britain has not been willing to reduce her garrison in Malaya, Hongkong and the Suez Canal zone. Britain is estimated to have 25,000 to 30,000 men (some estimates have been as high as 50,000) in Hongkong, 25,000 more in Mayala.

The prospect of a combined Commonwealth force was thought to be more likely than any Western Union action. European experts have warned repeatedly it would be folly to reinforce Korea at the expense of western Europe.

Nicaragua Set to Supply Armed Force, Somoza Says

Leukemia Victim, 7, Passes Away

. . . victim of leukemia

Not even Hopalong Cassidy, whose exploits are legendary, could save little Fred Lutz.

The 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lutz, 6114 Baltimore ave., Riverdale, Md., died Monday night in Children's Hospital of leukemia—10 months after his illness had been diagnosed.

His parents were at the bedside when the child died.

Fred had been in a coma most of Monday, and had not been able to speak very often for the past week.

On July 13, however, he had been able to say that he would like to see Hopalong Cassidy. The television cowboy, here for a circus performance, visited the lad before his first matinee performance.

Mr. and Mrs. Lutz have two other children, Anita, 5 and Donald, 2.

Funeral services will be held at 8 a. m. today at Gasch's Funeral Home, 4739 Baltimore ave., Hyattsville, followed by a requiem mass at St. Jerome's Church. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

U. S., Australian Fliers Slash At Communists' Supply Lines

At An Air Base in Japan, July 18 (U.P.).—American and Australian planes mounted a heavy offensive today against North Korean supply lines.

Bombing and strafing attacks demolished or damaged trucks, bridges, railway tunnels and a freight yard.

One United States F-80 jet plane was lost and two Royal Australian Air Force Mustangs were damaged slightly.

The jet crashed, exploded and burned about 25 miles southeast of Chungju. Pilots who observed the crash, believed to be the first F-80 lost in enemy territory, did not see the pilot bail out. They said the left wing ripped off the plane as the pilot attempted to pull out after making a pass at the target.

The Australian planes were hit by anti-aircraft fire but got back to their home base safely.

The raids were made with no enemy air opposition. The only North Korean planes seen in the air were two Russian-made Yak-9s which United States reconnaissance pilots sighted near Seoul. The enemy planes avoided a fight.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced the Australian and United States Fifth Air Forces flew a total of 128 sorties throughout northern-held Korea. Some of thet attacks were made along the front lines, to back up Monday's hard strikes. MacArthur said the pilots shot at almost everything that came in their gun, rocket and bomb sights.

Here is the score for the day's raids, made in almost perfect weather:

F-80s in 102 sorties destroyed four tanks, 31 trucks, one other vehicle, two bridges and one railway tunnel. They damaged 16 trucks, five other vehicles, one bridge and one railway tunnel.

B-26 light bombers flying 20 sorties, damaged one bridge and one marshalling yard.

Australian Mustangs flying six sorties destroyed one truck and damaged two trucks and one bridge.

Pilots returning from the missions said the North Koreans hide increasingly during the daylight hours and try to conceal their equipment. Members of one mission said they saw one locomotive hidden in a tunnel and another under a trestle.

Some targets had to be flushed from hiding, probably because of Monday's heavy strikes, MacArthur said. Tanks had pulled under sheds and other vehicles were partially camouflaged against the sides of buildings.

of them a pest hole of all the diseases of the Orient."

Because South Korean hospitals and medical facilities are badly overtaxed, the official went on:

"We must be prepared to assist the Korean government in fighting the diseases that are certain to become epidemic among the native population. The contamination of the soil and the water will mean a high sick rate among our troops."

The Army paper read at the briefing declared that "the operation in Korea is in large measure a war of logistics." Considering facilities now available, it presents problems at least as great as those of World War II, it was said.

Here are some of the difficulties outlined:

1. Tonnages—For each soldier sent to Korea, seven measurement tons of equipment must go with him and at least another ton a month must go in to supply him. That doesn't include a reserve build-up for an offensive. One division moved to Korea includes nearly 19,000 men and 4000 vehicles—85,000 measurement tons of equipment.

2. Distances—By ship from Seattle to Yokohama is 4276 miles; to Pusan it is 4649 miles. That's 19½ days by Liberty ship and 13 days by a 15-knot vessel. By Constellation, it is 5158 miles from the Air Force depot at Great Falls, Mont., to Tokyo—25 hours. The USAF's work-horse C-54 transport takes 40 hours, via Pacific stepping stones.

This is only part of the time element. Under ideal conditions, it takes a division 12 days from the time alerted to the port of embarkation, a week loading, 18 days to form into a convoy and en route to Korea, and another week unloading. How long to the front is open question.

3. Ports—Our only major port—Pusan—has berths for 25 ocean-going vessels and 15 coastal craft. While some tugs and ships repair facilities are present, there are probably no cranes for unloading heavy equipment. Three small ports are available—Masan, Yosu and Mokpo—the latter two capable of handling 800 tons a day at piers.

(4) Airfields—Taegu has a field with a 3000-foot runway, plus oil storage, hangars and shops. There are two fields near Pusan—Chinhae, with an 1800-foot grass strip, and Pusan, with a 6500-foot grade strip. The latter, however, is dangerous for transports, due to close-by mountains. Chinhae Bay is suitable for seaplane use.

(5) Railroads—Korea has modern, well-built railroads—a double-track and a single-track railway running north from Pusan—but is vulnerable to saboteurs due to many tunnels and bridges. There are—or were—170 tunnels and 700 bridges on the two lines from Pusan to Seoul. One tunnel is 7000 feet long and another is a spiral.

It takes 73 trains to move an infantry division — 23 freight trains of 70 cars each and 50 passenger trains of 10 cars each.

(6) Roads—there are no main highways as we know them in Korea. A first class road is of gravel and 24 feet wide at the most. Many bridges are one way, and only a few can carry loads up to 10 or 15 tons. (An American medium tank weighs 45 tons.)

Speeds of only 8 to 10 miles an hour can be averaged over the better roads. This being the rainy season, many of the roads are quagmires and flash-floods have carried away many bridges. The floods of refugees south presents another problem.

(7) Materials — Practically no materials are available in Korea for building or repairing roads and bridges. While Japan has some supplies available, "soon the 4x8 beams and 2x8 plankings to repair small bridges will, of necessity, be moved from the United States.

"Hospitals must be constructed," it was said, "Depots, warehouses and repair shops are required. Water supply systems and filtration plants are vital. Airfields must be improved or built, port facilities improved and increased. Fuel storage tank farms are vital.

"The Korean radio, telegraph and telephone facilities are antiquated and are over-taxed by the requirements of the Korean government and economy. The requirements of our forces must be met by the use of our own equipment moved in from Japan and this country."

500-600 Draft 'Delinquents' Registered With District Boards in Last 10 Days

Between 500 and 600 "delinquents" have registered with draft boards here within the past ten days, the District Selective Service System desclosed yesterday.

Although there are penalties applicable to young men failing to register within five days after becoming 18, the local draft officials have thus far taken the attitude that the "delinquents" simply forgot to register on time.

As of yesterday, 280 District men classified as 1-A have been notified to appear for pre-induction Army examinations beginning next Monday, July 24. Another 600 will be notified to take their physical exams during August, with around 400 scheduled to get their call during September.

The District's quota for the present call of 20,000 draftees for the Army is 101. When this number of inductees is reached, the other 1-A's undergoing pre-induction exams will be placed on a pipeline list for speedy induction should another call for selectees be issued soon, as expected.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the Army, which on Monday lowered its inductee standards for intelligence, has also eased up on its mental stability requirements.

During the war, according to an Army spokesman, persons with borderline neuropathic conditions were rejected for service. Now, however, the same types of cases are accepted for induction, so long as their history shows they've been able to get along okay in civilian life. The Army figures it can use these inductees for specialized types of work.

On the other hand, the Army has raised dental requirements. Toothless inductees were drafted during the war and provided with false teeth. Today the Army finds itself short of denture technicians and therefore insists on the inductee having 16 teeth in proper position.

Tornado Hits in Kansas

Humboldt, Kans., July 18 (AP).—A small tornado struck across farmland west of this southeastern Kansas town late today, ripping out hedge rows and damaging some farm buildings. There were no reports of injuries.

Amphibious Landing Made

nists from a town 20 miles north of the landing port.

Far more worrisome to Admiral Doyle was the immediate threat of an approaching typhoon. The admiral, a calm, soft-spoken veteran of Guadalcanal and New Georgia, had taken a difficult decision. He had resolved to race the typhoon and make a desperate effort to unload troops and essential equipment before the storm gets here.

The typhoon, roaring up from the Ryukyus, seemed likely to lash the west coast of Korea late Wednesday, then rip across the peninsula in a northeasterly course. For two days, meteorologists have watched apprehensively the twisting progress of this great storm, which they have named Gracie. Gracie already has embraced a lesser typhoon known as Flossie and the two girls can raise havoc on the beaches.

The harbor, exposed to the northeast, offers no shelter, except possibly to smaller craft. Thus, the admiral may be obliged to put his big ships out to sea, leaving his LSTS to ride out the storm in the harbor.

Under pressure of this threat, a secondary peril was almost forgotten. Soviet submarines have been on the prowl in the Sea of Japan and there were possibilities of a nasty incident.

If they should attack, World War III would begin here with a naval action.

The passage through the narrow Shimonosski Strait was made in daylight, with the help of Japanese pilots. Occasional groups of Japanese fishermen and schoolchildren cheered from shore. There could be no concealment of our intentions. We were clearly bound for Korea, but we hoped the spectators could not guess our precise destination on the peninsula.

The beachhead area was so placid that most of the landing craft came right into the dock, bringing their soldiers in dry. Natives said there were no Communist troops short of 30 miles, but that scattered guerilla groups occasionally harassed the road to the interior.

The soldiers on board had heard of the tough fighting of the last few weeks and their mood was far different than the picnic atmosphere carried in by the earlier arrivals. They acted like combat men. Particularly business-like was Master Sergt. Leonard D. Janicki of Cicero, Ill., who has seen 11 years' Army service, including action at Bougainville and Port Moresby in the South Pacific and at the Anzio beachhead in Italy.

"We've got some fairly effective weapons for stopping tanks and we're not going to run," the sergeant said grimly.

By midmorning this dusty, flea-bitten village was intolerably hot. There was no air, and the harbor was mirror-calm. Back of the town lay a semicircle of barren leprous hills. The brilliant sky held threat of the approaching typhoon.

(Associated Press dispatches said the convoy moved in under cover of United States and British airplanes.

(The General told news correspondents:

("Our job is to kill North Korean troops until the United Nations has won a victory in Korea."

(Diversionary gunfire was reported some distance up the coast by naval units supporting the landings.

(The seaborne movement obviously gave the battered American and South Korean defenders a more balanced front behind which a buildup of men and materials can be made more safely. It also will relieve other port and dock areas already overtaxed by the growing stockpile of American supplies arriving around the clock.)

Santiago, Chile, July 18 (AP).—National Defense Ministry sources said today that more than 100 Chileans and foreigners have volunteered to fight in the Korean war.

RAF in Sad State, Former Leader Says

London, July 18 (U.P.).—Retired Air Chief Marshal Sir Guy Garrod warned today that the Royal Air Force probably would be blasted from the skies if there is another "Battle of Britain."

Garrod, who served as air chief marshal from 1946 to 1948, blasted announcements which have indicated Britain is developing one of the world's leading air forces well supplied with the latest jet craft.

"Alarming," he said is an "inadequate" term for the present day RAF.

GIs Fire Mortars Till Arms Break

Targets of Reds

GI Hospital Units Erase Red Crosses

By Robert Miller

With Americans at Taejon, July 18 (U.P.).—American Medical Corpsmen have been forced to blot out the red crosses on ambulances and hospital units on the Korean front because they are becoming the favorite targets of the Communist soldiers.

The Americans learned the hard way that they are safer without the polished bright red crosses on their ambulances and flags flying from their litter jeeps.

It was only after medical units suffered casualties as high or higher than combat units that the red crosses were painted out.

Many Wounded Murdered

There is not a front line medic who has not been under fire at one time or another, while trying to bandage wounds and evacuate the injured. Several collecting stations have been overrun and many wounded have been murdered. At least two doctors have been killed while tending wounded at front-line hospitals.

The Americans now realize fully that the North Koreans know no mercy. They offer no quarter—and they expect none.

Corpsmen took off their arm bands and started carrying rifles for protection. They began evacuating wounded in tanks, instead of vulnerable ambulances and jeeps.

"What a bunch of innocents we were," declared Pfc. Edward Wilson, Chico, Calif. "The red crosses gave the North Koreans a better target to shoot at."

Sergt. Roy Stewart, Chester, Ill., said the first thing medics did after being fired on was to paint out their red cross insignia.

"We tried leaving some of the roof for air identification, but that just drew more fire, so we painted them out, too."

Company Shot to Pieces

Capt. Donald L. Buerk, a doctor from Freeport, Long Island, N. Y., said his medical company had been "shot to pieces" by Communists.

"Handling the wounded has been a terrible problem as the infiltrating enemy have no respect for the Red Cross and often seem to wait until we get our load of wounded aboard before they attack us."

"The real heroes of the war are the litter jeep drivers and corpsmen who drive through enemy roadblocks and fighting areas to bring out the wounded. Never once have they refused a call, even though it was often meant risking death and injury.

"Many times it has been necessary for us to load our wounded into tanks to get them through the enemy roadblocks to safety."

Lieut. Julius Okolovich, Nashua, N. H., said the first artillery target hit by Communists in Chochiwon was the hospital.

"We had to evacuate the wounded under fire but managed to get them all out safely," Okolovich said.

Corpl. Alfred A. Fankel, East Palestine, Ohio., a jeep litter driver, said he had to fight off an enemy sniper on the Kum River front while his corpsmen were bandaging a casualty.

"It was a case of one of us administering relief while the other was trying to kill," Fankel said. "We managed to get out with our wounded GI, but I was sure glad we had a rifle to help. Without it we would have been lost."

By William R. Moore

An American Command Post in Korea, July 18 (AP). — Thirty wounded American soldiers were reported tonight to have been shot to death on their litters by the North Koreans who swarmed across the Kum River Sunday night.

Two of those reported slain were mortar men who had held their mortar tubes in place by hand until their hands were burned and their arms broken.

This story was told tonight (Moore's dispatch was filed at 11:20 p. m. Tuesday (8:20 a. m. Tuesday, EST) by men of the Nineteenth Regiment who were in the thickest of Sunday's battle.

Sergt. Arnold McKenny, 28, of Newport, Vt., said the enemy murdered a Catholic chaplain "while he was giving the benediction."

Officer Shot in Leg

Capt. D. E. Sandstrom, 32, of Chadron, Nebr., said an American medical administrative officer who was shot in the leg told him "the North Koreans made gleeful noises while they were killing our wounded."

A North Korean soldier shot the medical officer in the left leg. The officer dropped into a ditch. The North Korean fired two more shots at him but was called away by another Red and joined in the slaughter of the wounded.

The medical officer lay in the ditch until nightfall, then made his way back to the American lines.

Sergt. Chester W. Van Orman, 32, of Gardiner, Me., told of the mortar men.

"There were three mortars and the Reds blew off the base plate of two of them," Van Orman related. "Another one got too hot and stuck. The other two kept right on firing. The men held them right in their hands until their ammunition was gone. They fired 900 rounds before they stopped."

(A mortar is little more than a steel tube fixed to a base plate. Mortar rounds dropped into the tube strike a firing pin that sets off the propelling charge.)

"Their hands were burned bad," broke in Pvt. Richard B. Shaw, 21, of Santa Barbara, Calif. "I took them back to the collection station There were about 30 stretcher cases there. They all got killed when the Reds overran us."

"Plain Cold Murder"

"I hope there's never one like that one," said McKenny. "I was surrounded eight days at Bastogne. Bastogne had nothing on that. This is just plain cold murder."

Van Orman said the Reds "wore civilian clothes in the daytime and pretended to be working in the fields. But we found prepared positions all through those hills. They even had set up machineguns behind us." When the Americans fell back, he said, "about 3 miles back from the river we ran right onto a machine gun. A gunner looked at me and I looked at him and said 'Anonay' (Japanese for 'Hello.' Japanese is widely understood in Korea). And he said 'Sayonara' (goodby) and fired.

He hit a medic who already was injured. I dropped into the rice paddy and tossed a grenade at him and then finished him and another Korean with my carbine."

GIs Move in to Set Up Defense Lines

Truman Making No Promise for Fall Campaign

President Truman received two bids yesterday to take part in fall political campaigns but declined to make any promises because of the international situation.

Alex Campbell, Democratic senatorial nominee in Indiana, said after a White House visit he invited the President to "join my campaign forces."

Mr. Truman told him he would go to Indiana during the campaign "if the world situation permitted," Campbell said.

Representatives Edward J. Hart, Hugh J. Addonizio, Peter W. Rodino, jr., and Charles R. Howell, all New Jersey Democrats, asked Mr. Truman to open the fall congressional campaign with a speech in Newark September 8.

Hart said the President indicated he would like to do it but could make no commitments in view of the Korean war.

Togliatti Goes Abroad; Red Parley Suspected

Rome, July 18 (AP).—Italian Communist leader Palmiro Togliatti left Italy for an unknown destination Sunday, informed sources said tonight.

Political circles speculated that Togliatti may be attending a meeting of the Cominform. Dispatches from Vienna to Rome newspapers reported yesterday that a meeting of top Communist leaders was believed to be in progress.

Gen. Dean Rides Jeep to Lead Tanks, Infantry in Assault

An American Command Post in Korea, July. 18 (AP).—Maj. Gen. William F. Dean personally led an attack that pulled some of his front-line troops out of the fire in Saturday's heavy fighting near the Kum River.

Back here briefly after four days in the front lines, the commander of the United States 24th Division disclosed. He put his jeep ahead of two tanks leading an infantry column against a roadlock on the American supply road. A unit was being sent to relieve heavily pressed troops on the Kum River line.

Dean went forward and found infantrymen had left their trucks to deploy. Going farther he found two armored cars, and around another corner the two tanks.

"Somebody who had the wrong information had come down that road telling them that Red tanks were coming against us," Dean said.

"I told them this was all wrong and put my jeep in front of the tanks and started up toward the roadblock.

"The Communists had mortar fire and machineguns covering the road.

"Pretty soon I looked back and found that the infantry wasn't behind us, so I went back to check. I found that when the men deployed the trucks had pulled away for cover.

"So I got more trucks and got the men in them and went on back up and found the armored cars had been knocked out by enemy artillery," Dean went on. "So had one of the tanks. And the other tank had not been able to break through the roadblock.

"Then I knew our people up ahead were in trouble. It turned out, however, that the regimental colonel on the other side had climbed in another tank and he was able to crack through the roadblock."

The Colonel, whose name is withheld, suffered a bullet wound in his right leg before smashing into the roadblock. When interviewed Monday, he omitted reference to this incident. Instead, all of the colonel's remarks concerned the heroic fight made by his men.

Johnson Asks Community Aid For ASAF Work

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday asked for Community support of the Associated Services for the Armed Forces—successor to the USO.

In a letter to Robert Dechert, national chairman of ASAF, Johnson said his department is "now more than ever looking to ASAF to help provide supplementary assistance to the communities working for the spiritual and moral needs of the men and women in uniform." Dechert said copies of the letter were going to 325 committees seeking local support for the program.

Earlier this week Dechert announced plans for expansion of the armed forces program of ASAF's three member groups—the YMCA, the National Catholic Community Service, and the Jewish Welfare Board.

Montgomery's Victory Group Candidates File

Members of the Democratic Victory Committee slate filed their candidacies officially yesterday with the Montgomery County Board of Election Supervisors.

The slate was announced last week after names of proposed candidates had been offered by county precinct leaders.

Civil Defense Officers Named

Richmond, Va., July 18 (AP).—Governor Battle today announced the appointment of a State Coordinator of Civilian Defense and a special assistant to work with the Governor's office in the organization of civilian defense activities in Virginia.

As coordinator, the Governor called upon J. H. Wyse of Salem, district highway engineer, to serve again in the same capacity he held during World War II from 1941 to 1945.

Britain Stops Oil Shipments To Red China

London, July 18 (AP).—Britain announced today that she has stopped all oil shipments to Communist China.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the action was a direct result of this country's participation in the United Nations battle to roll back the Communist invaders of South Korea. The British army, navy and air force in the Far East need all oil stocks in that area, he said, and have decided to take them over for their own use.

Earlier this month Britain turned down an American suggestion to limit oil shipments to Red China, in line with a similar American shutdown. The United States, diplomatic informants said, then renewed its request.

The State Department in Washington today said it was highly gratified. Officials believed the embargo would effectively shut off all Western oil to the Chinese mainland, where it might find its way to North Korean forces.

By so acting, Britain possibly risked whatever chance she has of completing a full exchange of diplomatic representatives with the Chinese Communist regime at Peiping, which she has recognized.

4-Year Soviet-Afghan Trade Pact Drawn Up

Moscow, July 18 (U.P.).—A four-year trade agreement between the Soviet Union and Afghanistan was concluded here last night and was followed by a reception for the Afghans in the Hotel National.

Amrudin Khan, the Afghan Minister of Agriculture who headed the three-man delegation from his country, said it was the first Soviet-Afghan trade agreement.

M'Arthur Lifts Ban to Permit Miss Higgins' Return to Korea

New York, July 18 (AP).—General MacArthur has lifted a ban against women correspondents in Korea, the New York Hearld Tribune anthe New York Herald Tribune anbune's correspondent, Marguerite Higgins, will be able to return to Korea from Tokyo.

MacArthur telegraphed the newspaper:

"Ban on woman correspondents in Korea has been lifted. Marguerite Higgins is held in highest professional esteem by everyone."

Miss Higgins, the only woman reporting the war in Korea, was expelled by an order of Eighth Army headquarters. She contended this was discrimination. Her newspaper sent a protest to MacArthur, and the Herald Tribune said the message from the general was in reply.

MacArthur previously reinstated two other correspondents after they were barred from Korea for quoting what some American soldiers had to say about the fighting.

The reinstated reporters are Tom Lambert of the Associated Press and Peter Kalischer of the United Press.

Miss Higgins announced in Korea yesterday that she had been ordered back to Tokyo under Army escort.

ahead. It took the form of letters to Raymond R. Foley, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency; Carl R. Gray, jr., Administrator of Veterans Affairs; Harley Hise, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, Thomas B. McCabe, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and Maple T. Harl, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. Truman reminded Housing Administrator Foley that residential construction in the last several months had risen to very high levels, and he added:

"Continuance of high levels would be very desirable were it not for recent international developments . . . It is already clear that, as a result of events of the last month, many materials used in residential and other construction will be required in increasing amounts for national defense purposes.

"It is imperative that these requirements be met fully and without delay. These increased demands will aggravate inflationary tendencies already evident in some of these materials unless positive actions are taken to reduce pressures in residential construction."

For this reason, Mr. Truman explained, he was not going to authorize the use of the full amount —$1,250,000,000—made available by Congress in the 1950 Housing Act for the insuring of new mortgages. He said it would not be in the public interest to use the remainder of that full amount. Accordingly, he auhtorized the use of $650,000,000.

The President then directed Administrator Foley to take the following actions:

"1. Employ as a ceiling in analyzing property for mortgage insurance purposes the construction costs existing on July 1, 1950.

"2. Reduce on all future applications for mortgage insurance, the maximum principal amounts, or the maximum percentages of appraised value or cost, or both, of mortgages so that required down payments will be substantially increased, especially for higher priced housing, excluding military housing and the Alaska housing program.

"3. Require substantial down payments for modernization and repair loans.

"4. Reduce substantially the availability of Federal Home Loan Bank credit to member institutions, especially for business expansion purposes, and through supervisory action, encourage the application of stricter credit standards on new mortgage loans by member home financing institutions.

"5. Limit the commencement of construction of public housing to not more than 30,000 dwelling units in the first six months of fiscal year 1951, during which time the public housing program should be thoroughly reexamined in terms of the developing international situation.

"6. Suspend for the time being commitments for direct loans for the construction of housing by educational institutions.

"7. Take such further actions as in your judgment are or may become necessary and appropriate (such as restriction of size of projects built for sale) to curtail the use in residential construction of materials essential to national defense."

President Truman requested Veterans Affairs Administrator Gray to take these actions:

"1. Require a cash down payment of at least five percent for all loans guaranteed, insured, or made by the Veterans Administration, wherever permissible under existing law.

"2. Increase such required cash down payments in amounts equal to any increase in appraised value occasioned by recogized increases in construction costs over those existing on July 1, 1950.

"3. Restrict direct loan authorizations in each calendar quarter of fiscal year 1951 to one-fourth of the total amount authorized for the fiscal year.

"4. Take such further actions as in your judgment may become necessary and appropriate . . . to curtail the use of residential construction of materials essential to national defense."

the amounts stolen or other details.

Alexandria police, who dubbed their culprit "the piggy-bank bandit," said it was the same in the housebreakings reported to them; the thief concentrated exclusively on loose cash and small articles of jewelry, ignoring anything bulky or heavy.

Monday's housebreaking reports began at 3:30 p. m. and for the next several hours the police switchboard was swamped as persons returned home to find their valuables gone.

In Monday's burglaries, the thief used a thin blade, inserted between the door frame and the door, to push back the bolt

Yesterday's break-ins were in two four-story apartment units, with about five apartments to each unit, police said.

Yesterday's housebreakings in Arlington and Alexandria were apparently committed in the same manner.

GOP 'Advance' Group Pledges Truman Support

New York, July 18 (AP).—The Republican Advance today pledged support to President Truman in the Korean crisis, but demanded the resignation of Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson.

The Republican Advance is a newly formed bloc of GOP members unveiled in Philadelphia July 1 under the leadership of Henry V. Poor, a New York attorney. It was formed with the announced plan of giving the Republican Party a positive program to build up its strength.

"Rarely in the history of the world, never in the history of modern times, has any nation been so outgeneraled," the Advance said in a statement on the Korean situation.

"Despite the almost incalculable errors into which this Administration has fallen, we of the Republican Advance pledge our support to our President, Harry S. Truman. . . ."

But, the statement continued, Johnson must go.

Inflation Seen by Eccles

Salt Lake City, July 18 (AP).—Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board said today dangerous inflation is developing rapidly because of the Korean crisis.

He proposed the inflation be checked through taxes, stricter credit control and reduction of civilian demand for goods.

Eccles, former Utah banker, suggested this fiscal program:

1—No reduction in taxes this year.

2—Reimpose a corporation excess profits tax of 75 percent on all net earnings above 10 percent of the first 5 million dollars of invested capital and 8 percent on any balance, allowing a $5000 exemption of earnings subject to tax.

3—Request organized labor to make no demands for increases while the excess profits tax is in effect.

4—Close tax loopholes.

5—Increase second and third class postal rates to meet Post Office Department deficits.

6—Treasury to offer non-bank investors long-term, non-market bonds with 15-year maturity interest rate of 2½ percent.

"The situation," he said, calls for the people to save their money and purchase more bonds. They cannot be expected to do this unless the Government takes the necessary action to protect the purchasing power of the dollar (their money) from further price inflation. . . ."

It is imperative, Eccles said, "to stop the growth of loans and investments.

Warns Atlantic Defense Faulty As Asia Policy

Are U. S. defenses as flimsy in the Atlantic as they have proved to be in the Pacific? Just 18 months ago, when all eyes were on the Berlin blockade, Freedom & Union warned that Stalin would shift pressure from Europe to Asia. Its editor, Clarence Streit, author of Union Now, looked ahead; he showed basic flaws in our Pacific policy would lead the Soviets to expand there.

Today, when all eyes are on Korea, Freedom & Union again looks ahead. Streit brings you in the current issue four pages of documented reasons why our Atlantic Pact policy "is liable to end in worse disaster than our China policy."

Judge what it may cost you not to look ahead. Read the warning events have already proved only too well founded.

Asia Forecast Proved True

In February, 1949, Streit wrote in Freedom & Union:

"The trend of recent events in Asia makes it all the more urgent that the democracies now working on an Atlantic alliance should work out an Atlantic Union instead. This for two major reasons:

"1. These events prove that the policy of the Atlantic Democracies in the Pacific is bankrupt; they need a common policy there that will honor the ideals of liberty they uphold at home, and encourage Asians to follow the free way of life.

"2. Continued glaring inconsistency of their Asian policy with their ideals can only encourage communism everywhere, and lead the Kremlin to correct one of its most helpful blunders by shifting its pressure from Europe to Asia.

"The Kremlin could hardly have adopted a policy more certain to bring the Atlantic democracies to unite than the one it has followed since 1945 in Poland. Trieste, Greece, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Germany, and its Berlin blockade."

Snail's-Eye View Is Corrected by Freedom & Union

"Instead of taking advantage of this to end the fatal disunion of the democracies by framing a firm federation while Soviet pressure facilitated this," Streit added, "Atlantic policy-makers have been dabbling with Western European 'Union' and Atlantic alliance.

"Their 'gradualist' approach to the immensely difficult problem of solidly uniting the free is as stupid as the Kremlin's blundering, for it is based on the assumption that the Kremlin will kindly continue to apply pressure on Europe generally, and Berlin particularly, so long as the timid statesmen in Washington, London and Paris need this pressure to paint their snail's eye picture of peace. . .

"Suppose (the Kremlin) wakes up soon to its present folly . . . The Kremlin can gain a good name merely by restoring to the western powers their land access to Berlin, though this leaves it still in the strongest military position around that city. Suppose it accompanies this peaceful gesture with those pleasant noises with which one sidles up to a jackass he means to saddle. . .

"Suppose it turns to a policy of conciliation in the West . . . long enough to gain most of Asia by concentrating its aggressive activity there. Where then would be the statesmen of the West who depend on Russian pressure in Europe—not on any positive policy of freedom and union—to unite their peoples?

Another Maginot Blunder Now

"These statesmen now seek to build a solid wall by pouring gravel between concrete forms without adding cement to hold it together. Where will these blundering builders be when Stalin removes the concrete forms he now supplies?

"In the East as in the West these leaders have failed to provide a positive policy for freedom. By this failure they encourage Stalin to concentrate on Asia and knock the props from under their flimsy building in the West."

Soon after Stalin let up on Berlin, he began marching through Asia . . . and now Freedom & Union predicts "Another Maginot Blunder," this time by the United States in the Atlantic.

Seamen's Union in Australia Removes Ban On Supplies to Korea, as Members Revolt

Sidney, Australia, July 18 (AP).—An official of the Seamen's Union disclosed today that the union's federal executive has lifted a ban on the transport of war material to Korea.

The executive faced a revolt from its rank and file membership against the ban. Anti-Communist officials said the violent opposition to the prohibition and a threat of government prosecution forced the executive members to retreat on their stand.

Apparently the leaders of the rank and file revolt did not know the ban was lifted when they attended a mass meeting today. At the meeting they threw out a vaguely worded executive recommendation condemning Australian intervention in Korea but making no specific reference to the ban.

Volunteer Plea Finds Man Serving in Korea

McKeesport, Pa., July 18 (AP).—A letter from the Army Surgeon General arrived yesterday at the McKeesport home of Dr. Norman E. Willis. It urged the Medical Corps lieutenant to consider active military duty because of the present situation in Korea.

The letter ended:

"I need not remind you that the need for doctors is a life and death matter to our men serving in Korea."

Willis already is in Korea—serving with a medical evacuation unit.

Pravda Claims Sinking Of American Cruiser

Moscow, July 18.(AP)—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported today that two North Korean torpedo boats sank an American cruiser on July 5 off the Korean coast.

(North Korean communiques have claimed the sinking of several United States vessels but there has been no American announcement of the loss of any ships.)

Minister Again Fights With Pilots in Korea

Marietta, Ohio, July 18 (U.P.).—Maj. Dean Hess, a "praise the Lord and pass the ammunition" fighter pilot, is back at it again today in Korea.

Major Hess, 33, of Marietta, turned down a chaplain's commission during World War II to enlist in the air forces. The ordained minister in the Christian church received the Air Medal and Distinguished Flying Cross after service in the European theater.

Hess was called to active duty from the reserves in 1948 and sent to Japan on April 10 of this year.

President of Mexico Opposes Aggression

Monterrey, Mexico, July 18 (AP).—President Miguel Aleman, expressing himself on international affairs for the first time since the Korean war broke out, says Mexico "condemns aggressive wars."

Education Minister Manuel Gual Vidal said the President's attitude is:

"Mexico condemns aggressive wars and domination in its different forms, military or economic, and will follow her unchanging tradition of peace and fulfillment of international obligations."

Mexico is a member of the United Nations, which voted to halt the North Koreans; and, as a member of the organization of American States, approved the United States' action in Korea.

Election in So. Korea Announced by Invaders

Tokyo, July 18 (AP).—The Seoul radio broadcast tonight that the Communist people's committee in Seoul announced it will hold elections in the occupied territories of Korea south of the Thirty-eighth Parallel starting July 25.

The Peiping radio said: "All Koreans above 20 have the right to elect and to be elected to people's committees in the liberated areas of South Korea, regardless of sex, nationality, class, creed, length of residence, property or degree of education."

The Peiping radiocast said the only exceptions are "pro-Japanese and pro-Americans and people suffering from nervous disorders."

Congress Debates Controls

initial consideration of a system of voluntary controls and restraints and said Republicans would "scrutinize" every Administration measure "to make sure it is actually necessary."

Sharp criticism of the Administration qualified many of the Republican statements. Taft and Martin charged that consultation with Republicans and Congress has been "totally lacking."

During House debates on the military assistance bill, Representative Frederick R. Coudert (R., N. Y.) made the bitterest attack of all.

Coudert proposed creation of a joint committee "for the purpose of controlling this Administration's actions during this perilous period."

The New York Republican said the country is "caught in a grim squeeze between ruthless ambition of the Kremlin and the blundering incompetence of the White House."

Following a Senate Democratic policy meeting, Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), predicted the President's emergency program will be rushed to the Senate floor within a week, then hit back at the Taft-Martin charges of non-consultations.

Lucas said ranking Republican on key committees have been freely consulted and aproved of the President's course.

"It is pretty much of a military matter now," said Lucas. "Senators may be great military strategists but I prefer to leave it in the hands of General Bradley and others trained for that job."

He agreed with an appeal from Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) for "full speed, around the clock industrial production to provide military equipment of the best type."

"I'd rather have too much than too little," said Lucas. "We should leave nothing undone in the mobilization of manpower and industry."

Some Senators, notably Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, and A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) urged Congress to enact a "preparedness tax bill" to pay for increased military appropriations.

But Lucas predicted "there won't be any tax increase in the President's message."

The Senate Democratic leader said if the emergency later requires it, new revenues can be quickly brought into the Treasury by retroactively taxing corporate excess profits, but added: "It's a pretty safe prediction there won't be any tax bill this session."

Across the Capitol, meanwhile, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, reported on Korean war developments to the House Armed Services Committee.

Following the closed meeting, Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) announced members of the House and Senate Armed Services and Appropriations Committees will be briefed in more detail at a meeting at the Pentagon Thursday.

Bradley told the committee the United States is now fighting "a delaying action against greatly superior numbers until sufficient forces can be built up to stop the Red advance," Vinson said.

"Later, the United States buildup will permit a counteroffensive. It was pointed out that this will take some time because United States forces are committed 5000 miles away."

Vinson described the delaying action as "very able." He said there were "minimum losses considering the nature of the engagement and the overwhelming numbers opposing them."

Pending President Truman's report to Congress today, and Thursday's Pentagon briefing, Bradley declined to go into details on the program ahead. Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, followed Bradley before the committee.

In these other Capitol developments:

Senator Bridges in a Senate speech called for a 25-point program, leading off with proposals to call up the National Guard, mobilize needed members of the active Reserve and draft necessary manpower. Bridges said Congress meanwhile should prepare legislation to provide "100 percent mobilization of our people and our resources within hours when and if it is needed." Bridges also proposed that we "mobilize anti-Communists everywhere," make use of the Chinese Republican army, reestablish relations with Spain, and ask MacArthur whether the Japanese should be armed. He said relations with Russia should be put on a "quid pro quo" basis.

Senator O'Mahoney called for higher taxes to finance increased military spending in a memorandum to members of his Joint Economic Committee. He said the tax increase would not only avoid an increase in the debt but serve as "an effective substitute for rigid economic controls." Recommendations of his committee staff for restoration of consumer credit control and allocation machenery for critically scarce materials.

The O'Mahoney committee staff recommended this administrative action at once: (1) Contract credit for all activities that unduly compete with the armament effort. (2) impound funds appropriated for non-vital postponable objectives (3) a program for private expansion of productive capacity of critical items such as steel and (4) encourage increased private savings, through sale of saving bonds.

Senator Robertson proposed a 10 percent step-up in income taxes, similar to the 1940 increases he helped sponsor. He said this would raise approximately two billion dollars, which should be put in a separate fund to be used for military expenditures only. Robertson suggested voluntary controls, but said it might be wise to provide standby powers to allocate steel and control consumer credit. The Virginian said he did not think it necessary to put the Nation on a "full war footing."

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D. Mo.) called for creation of a House investigating group to see that the war effort "is being carried forward efficiently, expeditiously and economically." If the House approves, he said he will turn the investigation over to a special war study subcommittee of his Appropriations group.

The Taft-Martin statement said Republicans in Congress "will continue to give their wholehearted support to steps necessary for the defense of the United States and resistance through the United Nations to Communist aggression in Korea and elsewhere."

But the two GOP leaders charged "disastrous policies in Asia" were pushed by the Administration for five years without consultation with Republicans, and Republicans were merely "notified" of the recent decisions in Korea.

Taft and Martin said they would support legislation "giving the greatest possible backing" to our men in Korea, but would make sure first that it was necessary and "not merely a step toward permanent Government controls." In any event, they said, voluntary controls should be tried before "compulsion is attempted."

Asked for comment, Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) said: "Mr. Taft is speaking for himself and so is Mr. Martin." Wherry said he would rather not comment on controls until the President has laid his program before Congress.

Yanks Hold; Enemy Tries Hard to Get Tanks Across Kum

"little enemy activity" and there had been no change since Tuesday afternoon's communique.

The Tuesday communique said Red reinforcements had been reported in motion southward, but it noted that since the North Koreans took Chonan (on July 8), they had averaged only four miles a day in reaching the outskirts of Taejon.

Crossing Cost Big Price

The last ferocious Red push carried across the Kum river Sunday night, forcing the American Nineteenth and Thirty-Fourth regiments back by sheer weight of numbers, but costing the invaders a big price.

Then the drive slowed and stopped late Monday.

Tuesday the wide-ranging American and Australian air forces found and destroyed three tanks and 28 trucks behind the enemy lines.

There were several possible explanations for the lull.

One was that of the United States Twenty-Fourth division and the Air Forces has taken such terrific toll during the Kum crossing that the Reds, although they got across, were still groyy.

Another explanation was contained in a remark by the division commander, Maj. Gen. William F. Dean after a visit to the front above Taejon. Dean said the Reds did not seem to like advancing without their tanks. The Kum bridges were so badly breached that the Communists were able to put only a few tanks across. The Air Force speedily attacked them.

Another possibility was that the far-ranging airmen had so battered Red supply dumps and lines that the enemy could not keep an offensive rolling. Pilots said Tuesday the Reds appeared to lay low by day and move armor and supplies only at night—a practice sure to cost an offensive its momentum eventually.

Expect New Enemy Push

Most observers believed all these factors entered in, but that the Reds would gather for another push. If it should prove powerful enough, the Americans and South Koreans were expected to continue their delaying battle while pulling back to strong hill positions some 35 miles southeast of Taejon.

Taejon, until recently provisional South Korean capital and American advance military headquarters, still was within American lines. These extended over a vaguely defined area north and west of the city and are held by the Nineteenth and Thirty-Fourth regiments of the Twenty-Fourth Division.

No major atack was made on these lines Tuesday (Korean time). There was also a lull to the east, where South Korean troops are holding. There had been no action of note in the South Korean sector for two days.

Associated Press correspondent Leif Erickson reported from the front that the Taejon airstrip remained in American hands. Three miles north of the city, it had been abandoned for air operations Monday after it came under fire. Bad weather had made it unusable for three days before.

Our Patrols Seek Enemy

Things were so quiet on the American front, an Eighth Army spokesman said, that patrols probed about trying to find out what the Communists were up to.

Available reports indicated the Reds still were having big trouble getting armor across the Kum. Eighth Army headquarters said only four tanks had been observed south of the river in the American sector east of Kongju.

An air communique covering fighting up to 2 p. m. Tuesday (11 p. m., Monday, EST) said 80 sorties had been flown and 3 tanks and 28 trucks destroyed. Monday's toll was 21 tanks, 143 trucks in 230 sorties.

Fighters sighted two Russian Yak-9 planes but the Yaks fled.

American and Australian fighters also strafed Red troop positions intensively Tuesday. The RAAF fighters were damaged by ground fire but got home.

MacArthur's Tuesday communique said three unidentified submarines had been sighted in waters bordered by Kyushu, Formosa and the China mainland. Russia is believed to have 70 or 80 submarines in Far Eastern waters.

The Communist radio at Pyongyang asserted more than 2500 Americans were killed and 100 captured up to 6 p. m. Monday (4 a. m., EDT.) and claimed "considerable" booty south of the Kum.

American authorities said the withdrawal from the Kum had been orderly and casualties not excessive. The Red radio admitted heavy losses during the B-29 raid on Seoul Sunday. It said 1000 houses were destroyed and many people killed. The radio said nothing of damage to the targets which the Air Force listed as attacked—railway yards and supply dumps. The radio alleged Red planes downed two B-29s. This the American Air Force flatly denied.

Wonsan Again Raided; Navy Planes Hit Port

Aboard United States Seventh Fleet Aircraft Carrier of Korea, July 18 (AP)—Carrier-based Navy planes raided the big north Korean east coast port of Wonsan today.

(Wonsan, 80 air miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel, was plastered by big superfortresses of the Far East bomber command last Thursday in the Air Force's inaugural of strategic bombing in the Korean war.)

Reuther Offers Plan For '100-Year Peace'

Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO's United Auto Workers, yesterday made public a dramatic proposal for "A Total Peace Offensive" to be won by an American pledge of 13 billion dollars a year, for 100 years, to the United Nations for economic and social development.

The new "Reuther Plan" would cost a total of one trillion, three hundred billion dollars over its 100-year lifetime, or the cost of World War II during its 44-month lifetime.

Only a plan such as that, Reuther argued, can win the world's faith away from the promises and the threats of communism. The union leader made clear his proposal was not a substitute for adequate and increased military defense, but rather a supplement to it and a strengthening of it.

It is, he said, "a positive program of social and economic action directed at elimination of poverty and social injustices which are the source of Communist power. . . . Only the United States has the material resources for the bold, constructive action needed to banish the fear that holds the world paralyzed on dead center."

The plan, which Reuther submitted to the White House last Saturday, appeared to have in it elements of the Marshall Plan, mutual military assistance, and Point Four ideas.

It called for the 13 billion dollars to be given to a U. N. fund. This, in turn, would be used to develop economic resources throughout the world and to raise living standards through health, housing and educational measures.

On accepting the money, however, the U. N. would have to convene an international disarmament conference. If one or more nations failed to agree to proposals for disarmament, including universal inspection and other security controls, they would not be entitled to receive any of the donated funds.

And meantime, the other nations would league themselves into a mutual defense pact, agreeing, however, not to use their armed forces outside their borders except at the direction of the U. N.

Reuther declared his "total peace offensive will expose, by contrast, in all its cynical and and coldly calculated brutality, the Kremlin's exploitation and enslavement of the people under its control . . .

"This is an offer understandable in any language because it talks in terms of tools, jobs, food, housing, health, education, security and freedom . . .

"We are at the place in world history where we must recognize that the best hope of saving freedom and achieving a just and lasting peace is in action—action so challenging, so vast in scope, so practical in design, and so sincere in purpose that it will fill the moral vacuum in the world with reborn hope and a renewed spirit of cooperation among the peoples of all nations."

Early Trial Likely on New A-Spy Charge

New York, July 18 (AP).—An early trial appeared likely today for Julius Rosenberg, accused of a part in the Klaus Fuchs Russian-backed atom spy ring.

Rosenberg, arrested by the FBI last night, was held under $100,000 bond. The charge is conspiracy to commit espionage. The maximum penalty is death.

His attorney, Emanuel H. Bloch, told newsmen he wanted an early trial and may seek a lower bail.

Chief Assistant United States Attorney Myles Lane said the case probably wil go to the Federal grand jury here soon.

Rosenberg's wife, meanwhile, said her husband was no Communist and called the charges against him false. She said she is a sister of David Greenglass, whom the FBI calls another spy ring member.

The FBI said Rosenberg recruited Greenglass to the spy ring.

Army-Air Requirements Cut Makes More Eligible to Serve

Lowered intelligence standards set Monday for prospective Army and Air Force enlistees have already begun paying off, District recruiters reported yesterday.

A total of 50 out of 63 applicants yesterday achieved better than the new minimum score of 70 on the intelligence tests.

Before yesterday, when 90 was the passing grade, about half the applicants flunked out, officials said.

Capt. William W. Cumbey, Army recruiting officer, yesterday invited all those who got between 70 and 90 on the test before the passing grade was lowered to call again. If they're otherwise qualified and still interested, they're in, he said.

Six men in that category took advantage of the invitation and were sworn in yesterday along with 30 others.

The Navy and Marines were still using their old standards, which are roughly equivalent to Army and Air Force standards before Monday.

Marine recruiters said their minimum passing grade is correlated to the general classification test score which boots must achieve to stay in the corps.

Lowering the standards on the enlistment test, they pointed out, would result in a greater percentage of "washouts" on other tests given after enlistees begin training.

Six of 39 applicants were found eligible for the Marines yesterday. Among 11 men sworn in was George R. Callahan, jr., of Clinton, Md., who was also celebrating his seventeenth birthday. Callahan was processed last week.

A dozen out of 25 applicants qualified for enlistment in the Navy yesterday. In addition, nine enlisted and 14 officer reservists volunteered to go back on active duty. No Wave reservists have as yet responded to the call for women volunteers issued Monday.

Army Reserve spokesman reported four volunteers for return to active duty. The new Army Reserve recruiting office at 2131 C st. nw., will remain open for applications from 7 to 8 p. m. today.

Rat Poison Killing Of Wife Charged To Industrialist

Cleveland, Ohio, July 18 (U.P.)—A wealthy, 631year-old Cleveland industrialist was charged with first-degree murder today after he admitted throwing rat poison into the face of his estranged wife during a scuffle over possession of two valuable paintings.

Joseph Gogan, 63, president of the Gogan Machine Corp., at first signed a statement admitting he broke into the home of his wife, Hazel, 45, yesterday. In tussling with her, when he tried to remove two paintings he claimed should have been part of his property settlement. He said he struck her with a bag containing calcium cyanide powder he used on his farm to exterminate rats.

Later Gogan changed his story and said the bag was accidentally broken in the struggle.

Hotel Clerk, 78, Repels Attack

Edwin M. Van Meter, 78, is beginning to wonder whether the occupation of a hotel clerk isn't riskier than that of a steeplejack, or maybe even a stunt flier.

Van Meter, night clerk at the Fulton Hotel, 512 I st. nw., was struck on the head and kicked in the stomach by two would-be holdup men early yesterday—the third time he has been held up in less than five years.

The two men registered at 3:40 a. m. and Van Meter took them to their room on the third floor. One of the men drew a revolver and nudged it in Van Meter's ribs, he told police.

Van Meter, grabbed the gun with one hand, reached for the gunman's throat with the other. The gunman's confederate struck Van Meter on the head. The gunman kicked Van Meter in the stomach and then he and his pal fled.

In the latest assault police are looking for one man, 25 to 30, about 5 feet 8, and 170 pounds, with light hair and a round face, wearing a white sport shirt and badge bearing the name of "Bill Bazler," and a second man, 30 to 32, about 5 feet 11, and 140 pounds, in a dark jacket and registered under the name of "W. H. Troson."

5-Billion Hike Seen Need to Arm Europe

By The Associated Press

Some of President Truman's advisers are reported to be urging him to seek five billion dollars more for arms aid to western Europe.

Officials said the amount would be in addition to the billions he is expected to ask today for the Defense Department to back up United States soldiers fighting the Korean Communists.

It also would be in addition to the $1,222,500,000 program the House is expected to vote today for arms aid to western Europe during this fiscal year.

Some high Government officials, it was learned, have told the White House the five billion dollars is urgently needed to bolster the North Atlantic area against possible Communist invasion.

They contend the attack on South Korea makes it imperative for the United States to step up the rearming of Atlantic Pact countries.

Some of the officials have urged that a specific request for funds be included in President Truman's message to Congress today on the Korean situation.

Others favor delaying the request until after the United States has had an opportunity to discuss the matter with the 11 North Atlantic Pact allies.

These officials have suggested President Truman put Congress on notice today, however, of the need for a vastly expanded program for strengthening western European military forces.

Officials had intended to get by with the $1,225,000,000 now being considered by Congress until next June 30. Tentative plans were being made, however, to ask for double or triple this amount for the 1952 fiscal year.

Czechs Try 22 In Gottwald 'Seizure' Plot

Prague, July 18 (AP).—Twenty-two persons were reported on trial today for an alleged plot to seize President Klement Gottwald and overthrow the Communist-led government of Czechoslovakia with Western help.

The Prague Mlada Fronta, youth union newspaper, said the group was being tried by a state court in Moravska-Ostarava, northern Moravia. The accused include "reactionary army officers," civilians and at least four security policemen, it said.

By the account of Mlada Fronta:

The indictment charged all with plotting to destroy "the people's democratic regime" and to prevent Gottwald from carrying out his duties.

It accused some also of spying for state secrets, "with the aim of betraying them to a foreign power."

One group planned to arrest the President and Cabinet members and cut telephone connections with the Soviet Union.

Military units and a factory militia were to be used in the uprising and military commanders were to be put over "some towns, where the arrest and liquidation of some military leaders and political figures was intended."

Daily Worker Blasts Wallace as Traitor

New York, July 18 (U.P.).—The Communist Party newspaper, The Daily Worker, which supported Henry Wallace for President in 1948, denounced him as a traitor today for blaming Russia for the Korean war.

In an editorial signed by Gilbert Green, one of the 11 convicted Communist leaders, the newspaper said:

"By giving his full support to the armed war against the Korean people, Henry Wallace has betrayed the cause of peace and the trust placed in him by millions of common men and women all over the world. By so doing, he has also betrayed his own principles."

Among those to whom automobile value is a living . . . Plymouth is the overwhelming choice!

Think of it! Of all standard-built cars registered as taxicabs, Plymouths outnumber all other makes combined! This puts Plymouth way out ahead of any make of car—with those whose very living depends on the all-around performance of their cars.

Think about it! If value-wise taxicab owners say that Plymouth is by far the best car of all for the money—isn't this convincing proof that the new Plymouth is by far the best car of all for your money? Why not find out? Ask your Plymouth dealer for a demonstration drive.

Crime Probers Will Extend St. Louis Stay

St. Louis, July 18 (AP)—Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of a Senate Committee investigating crime, said after a hearing today he had received "many evidences of interstate connections" in gambling here and across the Mississippi River in Illinois.

Because of testimony heard today, in a one-day stand, Kefauver said, the committee will continue its inquiry in this area. There was evidence, he said, that "outside influences from Chicago, members of organized syndicates, got into the operations in this sector."

He said gambling operations here were "nothing approaching the magnitude" of what the committee found in Florida, and that no one here had a "super bankroll" to compare with one in Florida. "The bookie operations here are much smaller," he said.

Some 30 witnesses, many from the nearby "East Side" in Illinois, were subpenaed. Kefauver said he was told the normal profits of Harlem Association, a policy game concern at Lovejoy, Ill., were $175,000 a year, with agents working on both sides of the river.

Kefauver said there was not much evidence of gambling in St. Louis apart from the fact that some gambling concerns have offices here. He reviewed the operations of C. J. Rich & Co. of St. Louis County, which was raided last month. He said that concern did a "very extensive" business of handling bets, mostly on horse racing, and extending into 19 States. Most of the bets, he said, were handled by Western Union men for a 25-percent commission.

Kefauver said "no direct evidence was presented to the committee that there was any contract or agreement between officers of Western Union and the Rich Co. The contracts were with agents of Western Union, the agents operating in a dual capacity."

He said, however, that if Western Union officials had taken the pains to find out "it was bound to come to their attention."

The site is located at McKinley rd. and N. 10th rd., in the Dominion Hills section

VA Officials Suspended in Irregularities

The Veterans Administration yesterday slapped 30-day suspensions on 10 officials in Tennessee regional offices.

They were charged with "irregularities, laxity and maladministration" in the 363 million dollar GI training program in Tennessee.

The charges were contained in a report of a special, seven-month investigation. Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., made the report available to Tennessee congressmen but it was not made public.

The VA officials under suspension include:

J. M. Nixon, general manager, Nashville; L. L. Beeler, assistant manager; Charles E. Donaghay, Knoxville branch manager; Miss M. E. Jackson, chief of finance section; Bruce Henderson, chief of vocational rehabilitation and education section; John D. Guthrie, chief of training facilities section; Lawrence Garrison, chief of contracts section; B. Frank Bell, chief of training officers section; Robert R. Quarles, chief of registation section, and David L. Harrison of the vocational rehabilitation and education section.

Representative Evins (D., Tenn.) said the charges grew out of overpayments made to two schools certified for GI training.

He said the Murfreesboro Practical Trade School submitted vouchers which led to an overpayment of $49,320.90. This sum was to have been repaid to the VA.

The other school involved, Evins said, was the Chattanooga Technical Training Institute

Million-a-Month Baseball Bet Ring Uncovered in Coast Raid

Culver City, Calif., July 18 (U.P.) Police uncovered a gambling ring today that took $1,500,000 a month in bets on baseball games and is run by "people pretty well known throughout the country."

"We have absolute proof of its tieup with with a syndicate with outlets in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston and other places," said Detective Robert M. Conlon of the Culver City police.

Conlon said FBI and Treasury Department agents moved into the case but that he could not identify the heads of the syndicate until they are arrested.

Raid on "Horse Room"

The ring was uncovered in a raid on the backroom of a drugstore that was suspected to be a "horse room." Police found ledgers there containing entries pointing to the brains of the outfit.

The ring took bets on the outcome of games and individual player performances in the American, National and Pacific Coast Leagues, Conlon said.

The ledgers were kept up to date from March 23, when the Pacific Coast League opened, and showed that the daily take of the ring jumped from $12,688.50 on opening day to more than $100,000 on many occasions.

Conlon reported that entries in the ledger showed that as much as $35,000 a day was bet in San Diego alone.

The syndicate catered to a select trade that included "lots of prominent people, including movie stars," he said. The names of about 200 prominent Californians were in the ledgers.

Only three men were arrested in the raid and they were identified as "only the guys who handled the telephones." Herman Mallard, 39, Joseph Harris, 50, and Max T. Brown, 47, all of Los Angeles, 12 miles from here, were charged with violation of the city bookmaking ordinance. They were released in $250 bail.

"We didn't realize what we had," police said, adding that more serious charges will be brought against the three.

Conlon and Police Sergt. M. H. Martin said that while they made the arrests about $150 in bets were phoned in within three minutes. The back room of the drugstore was equipped with a short-wave radio in addition to standard bookmaking equipment such as telephones, ledgers and account sheets.

Schenectady Transit Halted by Walkout

Schenectady, N. Y. July 18 (AP).—Thousands of weary factory workers in this city of 94,000 hoofed it home in 86-degree heat late today after a walkout of bus drivers virtually had paralyzed public transportation.

About 35,000 persons use the Schenectady Railway Co. buses daily. This includes service halted in interurban lines to nearby Albany, Troy and Saratoga Springs.

The walkout, over pension payments, started with a mass meeting at 9 a.m. of 280 drivers and mechanics of Local 159, CIO Transport Workers Union.

Mobile Fires Firemen, Cops In Union Ban

Mobile, Ala., July 18 (U.P.)—City officials removed 33 firemen and eight policemen from their jobs today for holding membership in a labor union.

The Mobile Central Trades Council (AFL) has called a mass meeting of all AFL unions at 7:30 p. m. to consider the matter.

Last week the city council adopted an ordinance banning police and firemen from belonging to labor unions. Monday night was set as the deadline by which they must sign pledges disclaiming labor union membership.

A city commission spokesman said removal of the men from their jobs would have little effect on the efficiency of the departments.

Sam Shannon, of the Central Trades Council executive board, in announcing tonight's mass meeting of labor union men here, said there was a definite possibility of a one or two-day shutdown here to demonstrate organized labor's sentiment in the controversy.

The policemen are connected with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFL). The firemen belonged to the AFL International Association of Firefighters.

A circuit court hearing has been set for 2:00 p. m. Wednesday on a petition by four of the non-signers, seeking to prevent the city from enforcing its ban on union membership.

Annapolis, Md., July 18 (AP).—Joseph Anthony Zack lost another round today in his five-month court battle to block extradition to Pennsylvania.

Maryland's Court of Appeals denied his petition for reargument of his appeal for a writ of habeas corpus which would set him free.

Zack, 36-year-old Baltimorean, is wanted in Lebanon County, Pa., to face safecracking charges.

House Probers Urge Citing of 7 Witnesses

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Committee on Un-American Activities yesterday recommended that the House cite seven witnesses for contempt, including five left-wing electrical union officials, who refused to say whether or not they were Communists.

The new action brought to 57 the total citations recommended by the committee this session.

The union officials are all members of the United Electrical Workers (Independent), recently expelled from the CIO on grounds of Communist domination. Heading the list were James J. Matles, UE organizational secretary, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer.

All but one, Emspak, took refuge in the Fifth Amendment, refusing to answer questions on the ground of possible self-incrimination. Emspak said in effect that he did not believe the committee had any right to question him about his associations or his political beliefs.

If the cases eventually get into court, however, the witnesses must show that answers to all the questions to which they refused to respond would actually incriminate them. Many of the witnesses refused to answer even the simplest of questions.

The proposed citations must be approved by the full House of Representatives before they can be sent to the Justice Department for prosecution. Maximum penalty is one year in jail or a $1000 fine, or both.

All seven witnesses were called during the committee's recent hearings on Communist activities.

In addition to Emspak and Matles, those recommended for contempt citations were:

Talmadge Raley, business agent of Local 766, UE, Cincinnati.

Thomas Fitzpatrick, chief steward, Local 601, UE, Pittsburgh.

Thomas Quinn, former UE field organizer in the Pittsburgh area.

Frank Hashmall of Cincinnati, described in committee testimony as a former Communist Party functionary in Franklin County, Ohio.

David Levison, described in testimony as a member of the Communist Party in Cincinnati.

Birmingham Gives All Reds 48 Hours to Get Out of Town

Birmingham, Ala., July 18 (U.P.).—The city commission outlawed the Communist Party within the city limits today.

The commission in an ordinance unanimously approved, gave Communists 48 hours from publication of the notice to get out of town or risk arrest.

The ordinance said Communist Party membership will be taken for granted if a person "shall be found in any secret or nonpublic place in voluntary association or communication with any person or persons established to be or to have been members of the Communist Party."

The anti-Red ordinance was introduced by Police Commissioner Eugene (Bull) Connor, arch foe of communism. It passed without opposition and without discussion.

It declares it will be unlawful "for any officer or member of the Communist Party of this or any other country or countries to be within the corporate limits or police jurisdiction of the City of Birmingham in or upon any day after 48 hours of the publication of this ordinance . . ."

The law said that it shall be prima facie evidence that a person is a member of the Communist Party if he circulates or distributes literature "issued or purporting to have been issued by or over the name of such Communist Party or any branch thereof."

Those found guilty will be liable to a $100 fine and 180 days in jail.

Last week two men, Sam Hall, jr., and Paul Thomas Rosenblum, were arrested on charges of vagrancy, in connection with Connor's drive on communism. Both have appealed their arrests.

Tydings Group Probe Ended

whatever fireworks there are going to be will be shot off.

It is questionable, even if they had the majority in votes, whether, the Republicans could block the the filing of a report with the Senate.

Earlier yesterday, at a tense 2½-hour session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that body voted, 9 tot 2, to send the report to the Senae.

Republican Senators Lodge (Mass.) and Hickenlooper (Iowa), minority members on Tydings' subcommittee, were the dissenters. One Senator described the committee session as "more of a fencing match than a slugfest."

The two Republicans complained, it appeared, not so much at the unprecedented furious language about McCarthy as about a few cracks against them in the majority report.

One was that they had only bothered to read 9 to 12 of the 81 loyalty files made available to them, after the Republicans had demanded that those files be opened for examination. Tydings refused to remove the passage complained of.

He agreed, however, to omit from the report a sentence noting that Lodge and Hickenlooper could not agree whether sessions of the five-month investigation should have been open or closed, and another passage remarking unfavorably on the attendance record of the two Republicans at subcommitee hearings.

The full commitee then voted to discharge the subcommittee from its assignment, begun in February, to investigate the question of Communist or disloyal influence in the State Department.

When Tydings sought to file his motion yesterday, Senator Saltonstall (R., Mass.), temporarily acting as minority floor leader, sought a quorum call to delay proceedings temporarily. He explained that McCarthy had asked him to take such a step, in order to give him time to get on the floor when Tydings was about to file the report.

No quorum call was taken, but the ensuing discussion took up a quarter of an hour, during which time McCarthy failed to appear. He had entered the Senate chamber a few minutes earlier and was seen going into the cloakroom, but did not emerge while the issue was under debate.

Economy Bloc's Ax Opposed by Truman

President Truman yesterday advised Senate Administration leaders he is opposed to the so-called Bridges-Byrd amendment slashing nondefense funds in the 34.6-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill by a flat 10 percent.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told newsmen the President "hopes the amendment will be defeated."

Lucas disclosed the President's opposition to the coalition economy bloc move while relaying Mr. Truman's "gratitude" to members of the Senate Appropriations Committee for completely restoring a 16.9-million-dollar cut in his "Point Four" program.

Almost Solid GOP Backing

The Bridges-Byrd amendment, almost solidly backed by Republicans and supported by some Democrats, imposes the 10 percent cut in nonmilitary spending on top of earlier reductions voted by the Appropriations Committee.

Although most war-related activities would be exempt, Marshall Plan funds were left subject to the slash. In fact, the combined cut would amount to about 20 percent on ECA and some other previously deeply slashed agencies, like the State and Commerce Departments.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J. confirmed that he will offer an amendment exempting ECA from the new 10 percent cut. If his move fails, he said, he will still vote for the over-all nondefense cut but will later move to increase ECA funds by the amount it was slashed.

Action on the big "single package" money bill dragged on in the Senate pending an expected attempt to limit debate by unanimous consent.

Minor Taft-Wherry Victory

Republican Senators Robert A. Taft (Ohio) and Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) meanwhile, won a minor victory in their fight on the Brannan plan.

The Senate approved Taft's motion to restrict Agriculture movies to programs "approved by Congress." The limitations is designed to prevent use of films by the Agriculture Department to promote the Brannan plan.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.), said the departmental films were on non-controversial subjects. He said Taft and Wherry were "seeing ghosts" and "slaying dragons that don't exist," but finally agreed to the restriction.

Wherry said he wanted to be sure the departmental films couldn't be used to promote the Brannan plan or "any other plan thought up by the department."

CED Supports Flexible Basis For U.S. Taxes

Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, told Congress yesterday that Federal tax rates should be set high enough to "balance the budget and leave a moderate surplus for debt retirement" when the economy is running full blast.

He testified before the House Executive Expenditures Committee on behalf of the Committee for Economic Development, an organization of businessmen devoted to nonpartisan study of national economic questions.

Graham set the CED supports "in general" a bill introduced by Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D.-Lib., N. Y), to put Federal taxing and spending policies on a flexible basis geared to economic fluctuations.

A policy of cutting taxes only when Government spending also is cut, Graham said, "attaches an immediate, visible and highly desired reward to Government economy."

Court Ban on Segregation In St. Louis Pools Put in Effect

St. Louis, July 18 (U.P.).—The city's request for a stay of execution of the Federal Court order ending racial segregation in the municipal swimming pools was turned down today.

United States District Judge Rubey M. Hulen, who issued the order yesterday, rejected the request of City Counselor James E. Crone to hold it up pending an appeal to the Eighth United States Court of Appeals.

The city counselor urged the court to allow time for the change in a traditional custom to work "into the minds of the public."

Hulen said he had no choice "in a case which shows a man's constitutional rights are being abrogated. People are either entitled to equal rights, or they are not."

Meanwhile, police assigned additional squads of officers to the outdoor pools in Marquette and Fairgrounds Parks, cited specifically in Hulen's order, and the department said it would be able to handle any situation that might arise Wednesday, the effective date of the order.

Joint Secretaries

Formulation of a new "executive committee" of armed forces secretaries is encouraging recognition of the increasing political implications of today's military problems. The new Joint Secretaries, under the chairmanship of Army Secretary Pace, will do on the politico-civilian side what the Joint Chiefs of Staff are now doing with respect to military strategy. They will in effect predigest some of the long-range problems with which they are jointly concerned so that definite agreed-upon policies can be recommended to the Secretary of Defense or to the Armed Forces Policy Council which is composed of the civilian secretaries along with the Joint Chiefs.

The importance of this kind of planning is evident in the nature of the problems involved. A service secretary these days must be a geopolitician, concerned not only with the strictly military aspects of the world situation, but also with the world economic picture, with relations with other countries and with psychological warfare. The joint secretariat should be especially useful in tackling some of the outstanding problems under the North Atlantic Treaty. How, for example, can participating countries be induced to move faster on the concept of balanced collective forces? How much can they contribute without disrupting their economies? Similarly, with respect to the Korean action, the secretaries no doubt will want to consider whether the atomic bomb should be used, and such other knotty problems as what should be done when American-United Nations forces reach the thirty-eighth parallel going north.

These are the sorts of issues that were left largely to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in World War II. The new body will in no way supplant them, but it will assure that other than strictly military aspects will be making definite an existing informal relationship between the secretaries. The group is fortunate to have the services of Edward T. Dickinson as Assistant to the Joint Secretaries. Mr. Dickinson has had valuable experience as a program coordinator in ECA and later as a liaison man with the military assistance program, and he is in an excellent position to see how military planning fits into the over-all picture. In short, the creation of the Joint Secretaries is an example of unification at its best—the kind of teamwork that the Korean crisis and all that is behind it demands.

Statehood Now

If there was ever a time when the United States needed to set an example to the world of its treatment of dependent areas under its control, this is it. The Korean conflict, far from lessening the importance of statehood for Hawaii and Alaska, actually increases it. This voluntary step would have great psychological effect in anticolonial countries such as India and Indonesia. And, as Defense Secretary Johnson has stated, strong elected local governments in Hawaii and Alaska would be important in the case of attack. "Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii," he writes, "would undoubtedly give a considerable added measure of strength to the over-all defense of both areas in event of an emergency."

Fortunately the statehood bills, both of which have passed the House, are high on the Administration's agenda and there is good prospect that they will be brought up in the Senate shortly. For this Alaska and Hawaii have cause to be grateful to Senator O'Mahoney and the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee which he heads. The committee has issued thorough and convincing reports on both bills which effectively dispose of the arguments against statehood. Both Territories, the reports show, are steeped in the traditions of Americanism and self-government, have voted for statehood, and are financially able to assume the responsibilities of membership in the Union.

In the case of Hawaii, the report debunks the charge of communism, citing repeated investigations and figures showing that there never have been more than 160 Communists in the islands; Communist influence has waned through alertness on the part of the people. The argument of noncontiguity, which applies to Alaska, too, is answered by the fact that both Territories are far closer in terms of air-time today than many present States were even 50 years ago. As to the effect of the large non-Caucasian population of Hawaii, the report has merely to cite the magnificent combat record of Hawaiian units in World War II.

Alaska's population has usually been her most vulnerable point. However, this today is estimated at 135,000—nearly the same as Nevada's—and is increasing rapidly. The report emphasizes that full economic development and realization of Alaska's tremendous potential are not possible without statehood. Under the bill Alaska would derive much more benefit from her own rich resources. The eyes, not only of these Territories, but also a large part of the world, will be on the Senate. It ought not to hesitate in strengthening the Union with these Pacific bastions of Americanism.

Not The American Way

Passage of the Hobbs bill by a vote of 326 to 15 in the House must be regarded as a popular demand for tightening up the law in regard to deportable aliens. Since the bill was debated for only 40 minutes, it is reasonable to suppose that many members who voted for it were not familiar with its details. They voted affirmatively, we suspect, because they believe that subversive and criminal aliens should not be allowed to roam the country without check or supervision so long as the countries from which they came refuse to take them back again. We sympathize with that point of view while deploring the drastic remedy that the Hobbs bill would apply.

The bill has been substantially improved by amendment. Its most drastic provisions are aimed only at alien criminals and subversives who have been found guilty of violating the law and then ordered deported. Certainly aliens of this type should not be footloose merely because the country from which they came is unwilling to receive them. In some instances subversives from the Iron Curtain countries continue to do their nefarious work here because regimes which sent them to the United States refuse to take them back again. This makes a mockery of American law. We should not put ourselves at the mercy of communistic agents in this fashion. But we ought to deal with these people in accord with the pattern of American justice and not merely give the Attorney General power to throw them into concentration camps, which is the Communist method.

The bill would not require imprisonment of the deportable aliens in question. As an alternative, the Attorney General could require them to report regularly to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to submit to medical and psychiatric examination, to give information under oath as to their habits and activities, and to conform to reasonable regulations to be laid down by the Attorney General, until their deportation could be arranged. Properly administered, this section of the bill would afford a salutary check upon the activities of the undesirables in question. It would enable the Government to keep close watch on what they were doing. Under even the amended bill, however, the Attorney General could step in at any time and order that any alien so controlled and supervised be sent to prison.

It is this provision that is utterly out of keeping with the American concept of due process. We have no doubt that some of the subversive deportable aliens now at large ought to be locked up. But let it be done by bringing proper charges and giving each a fair trial. Proponents of the bill made much of the fact that the individuals concerned have already been tried. But they have also paid the penalty for the offenses for which they have been convicted. What is involved under this bill is a second punishment, without any second trial, merely because deportation cannot be carried out. This is certainly un-American and probably unconstitutional. No such sweeping discretion should be vested in the Attorney General.

Any extensive exercise of this power would result in the establishment of concentration camps. The experience of other countries has proved that, once established, the concentration-camp habit grows. How long would it be before citizens regarded as dangerous to our national security would be thrown into concentration camps without trial? The only safe and reasonable course is to hold fast to the principle of imprisoning people only for crimes for which they have been convicted through our established judicial process. The maintenance of liberty within the country is no less important than defense against enemies without. It is up to the Senate to reshape the Hobbs bill into an effective control system over aliens awaiting deportation without turning over to the Attorney General the power to make the United States a concentration-camp country.

Evangeline Booth

Not many women have been as much loved by Americans of every class and condition as Gen. Evangeline Cory Booth, former international commander of the Salvation Army, who died on Monday at the age of 84 years. It is largely due to her personality that the Salvation Army, once an object of jest among the unrighteous and of suspicion among the followers of other churches, has taken its place among the most respected institutions of American society.

She was born on Christmas Day in 1865, a circumstance which her father, Gen. William Booth, founder of the movement, interpreted as a sign of special favor from heaven. He was not disappointed. Evangeline was a child when Booth, a Methodist evangelist, decided to reorganize his Christian Mission upon the model of the British Army regulations and launched his earliest campaigns in the most degraded slums of London. Today it is difficult to understand the alarm excited in the Victorian propertied classes by this grandiose plan to rescue the British poor from alcoholism and sloth or to realize that such observers as T. H. Huxley regarded it as a dangerous revolutionary movement that threatened the destruction of the whole social order. Gangs of hooligans were encouraged to break up the meetings by violence. The poor themselves were highly suspicious of this sudden solicitude for their spiritual and material improvement. But like other religious movements the Salvation Army gained fresh strength and zeal from every outrage.

Almost from the beginning Evangeline was in the thick of the battle. At 15, already a sergeant, she was banging a tambourine and preaching in neighborhoods into which able-bodied gentlemen would scarcely have ventured after dark. But she soon won the toughest hearts of Limehouse and Whitechapel by her enthusiasm and pluck, and presently a kind of volunteer guard was formed to protect her. When she was 23 she was in command of all the army's operations in the city of London.

The tougher the mission field the more it was to the liking of Evangeline Booth. At the height of the gold rush she led a little band of zealots to the Klondike fields. When she came to the United States in 1904 to take charge of operations here, the situation of the Salvation Army was not altogether propitious. Seven or eight years earlier her brother, Ballington Booth, who had been in command of the American mission, had quarreled with their father about the most effective means of advancing the cause in this environment. The consequence was a schism, involving the secession of several regiments of trained and devout soldiers and the formation of the Volunteers of America, which has continued until this day to function as a separate organization.

But by the same qualities that had conquered the roughnecks of Limehouse, Evangeline Booth set about to conquer for God the tenderloins and skid rows of the great American cities. She trained her soldiers by her own example. In 1917, however, she captured America at large by the happy stroke of sending her girls with the American Expeditionary Forces to comfort the troops with doughnuts and cheerfulness. The good will earned for themselves by these "Salvation Sals" was worth millions of dollars of publicity, and from that time forward any project undertaken by the Salvation Army was assured of widespread popular approval and support.

Point IV Rescued

It takes courage to admit a mistake. The Senate Appropriations Committee has shown such courage in reversing its earlier decision to slice, to the verge of ineffectuality, Point IV funds for technical assistance to needy countries.

Even though the reversal required an urgent plea from President Truman, the committee deserves no less credit for at last perceiving how deeply the national interest is involved in the Point IV program, particularly at this time.

The $16,900,000 restored by the committee, if sustained by the Senate, will bring the program within $500,000 of the 35 million dollars originally authorized by both houses of Congress. While not permitting in any way a lavish effort, it will at least provide a start in the kind of assistance related to the actual needs of individual countries and calculated to encourage self-help. It will keep intact, for example, the commitment of $12,500,000 for the United Nations technical assistance program and the $7,600,000 for existing activities under the Institute of Inter-American Affairs and the Smith-Mundt Act; the remainder will be available to send advisers to countries such as India which has been clamoring for them.

Point IV in operation will be tangible evidence that the United States is concerned with the conditions that breed communism. This and the expanded information program, which Senator Benton and others have repeatedly called for and the Administration has finally implemented, are two sides of the same coin. The campaign of truth requires positive acts to back it up. We do not see how any legislator who appreciates the seriousness of the situation in Korea can fail to recognize the necessity for practical economic measures to strengthen other areas susceptible of Communist infection.

"Stockholm Appeal"

No doubt there will be general sympathy for the Swedish government in its discomfiture over identification of its capital city with the Communist-sponsored "World Peace Appeal." This propaganda flim-flam came out of a meeting held in Stockholm last March by an organization calling itself the "Partisans of Peace." And because of the place of origin, the product is sometimes referred to as the "Stockholm appeal or resolution." But of course Stockholm can no more be held responsible for this than New York can be held responsible for having served a year earlier as the site of a similar gabfest styled the World Cultural Conference or something of the sort.

However the Prime Minister of Sweden has been sufficiently distressed about the matter to express publicly "considerable disgust that we here in Sweden witness the brandishing of the name of our capital in this way in the international Communist propaganda." The number of American gullibles who have signed the "appeal" is a fresh demonstration of the force of Barnum's adage—"there's one born every minute." But Sweden can remain confident that the overwhelming majority in this country who recognize the "Stockholm resolution" for what it is recognize also that Sweden had no part in concocting it.

NIGHT SWIMMERS

Silent we swam in rippled light,
Drifting like flowers in the summer night.
When we ran beside the sea, a wind from off the snow
Shivered across the water's flow.
We watched the deep pools grow
Where the foot's pressure left its mark.
Leaves of the orange tree were dark,
Were lustrous in the fragrant noon
Of fruit and blossom and the Moon.
The orchard made a living frame
For sea and swimmers and the flame
That burns within sweet summer's name.

"This Is An Emergency. We Must Raise Prices At Once"

Outmoded War Hoarding

By Malvina Lindsay

Shades of 1941

THE CHRONIC panic buyer and hoarder is rearing his foxy head again. But it seems likely that his techniques of 1941 may be outmoded—in fact may prove a boomerang.

He may be able to cause plenty of trouble first, to boost inflation, to weaken temporarily the home economy, to bring on drastic controls. But in the end he will find that things have changed in the last nine years.

Should he buy much beyond his needs he will be up against the problem of where to cache his loot. For he is likely to have greater possessions than in 1941. He has been employed regularly for years now at relatively good wages. His family probably bought enthusiastically during the war boom and since, of needed goods, of long-desired luxuries.

His clothes closets are crowded as never before. A recent checkup on consumer clothing stocks made by the Department of Agriculture shows that the average family could be comfortably (though probably not fashionably) clothed for years on what apparel it has.

The average man, according to the survey, has three coats, five pairs of trousers, four hats, fourteen shirts, three jackets, four pairs of shoes, as well as a good supply of socks, ties, handkerchiefs, gloves, scarfs and underwear. His wife's wardrobe includes three coats, three suits, four hats, five house dresses, six other dresses, six pairs of shoes, nine pairs of stockings (probably nylons), also much underwear and accessories. Children are equally well equipped.

THE AVERAGE family now is well supplied with hard goods. It is likely to have a motor car, radio, new household appliances. It has probably restocked on its furniture, may even have crowded a television set into the living room. If it is in the comfortable strata from which most hoarders come it likely has a deep freezer full of food.

On top of this, Uncle Sam's bins are bursting with stored grain, butter, eggs, dried milk, other edibles, which could be dumped into the market to curb inflationary food prices.

Or suppose the foreign situation got definitely worse. And that shortages, thanks to the scare buyers, began to develop. This time with possibilities ahead so grim, there would be no official fooling around, no business as usual. The hoarder likely enough would have to surrender his stockpiles.

And if the worst happened—a mobilization for total war—the hoarder would find himself in the web of real regimentation. His stored treasures would have little value, in fact, might be a deadweight.

For in a modern war most individuals would need to be prepared for mobility—for decentralization, evacuation, assignment to places where they would be most useful or least in the way.

THIS MAY seem an alarming picture. But since the scare buyer and hoarder prides himself on being above all practical and farsighted, it is an "if" that common sense should cause him to consider before rushing to buy unneeded.

Moreover, should scare buying, hoarding and profiteering develop to a dangerous extent, not only the Government, but public opinion as well, is likely to crack down on those who practice it. The leniency of 1941 toward such practices is not likely to be repeated.

For the reverses in Korea are slowly awakening the country to the fact that business as usual can't go on. Democratically governed people are inevitably slow about getting into action when threatened with danger. But there is a tide of determination now rising in the country.

This is not likely to countenance the playing around that persisted through the early years of the last war. The mood of the people is such that we are not likely to see again the mobs around costume jewelry counters, the nylon queues, the grab for luxuries, the hectic excitement in night clubs.

It is possible that panic buying may not develop to the extent feared. But inflationary tendencies are showing up in some lines. And there have been runs on sugar, tires, other goods. Scare buyers, and hoarders, also profiteering dealers, should feel now the weight of public disapproval and scorn for their shortsighted, unpatriotic rocking of the price boat.

"Funds For Truth"

May a visitor from Chicago be permitted to comment briefly on your excellent July 15 editorial, "Funds For Truth," dealing with this country's overseas information program?

In past years, both during and after World War II for a time, I had a number of occasions to observe the work of that program, and I gained the distinct impression that altogether too much emphasis is placed on supervision and far too little upon creative output. All workers are human, and those I have seen in the program have long since grasped that promotion and better pay lay in the supervisory channel, not the actual thinking and planning and writing of the words with which we must counter the Kremlin's output successfully.

Both Senator Benton and Ed Barrett are able citizens in the writing and idea business. Doubtless they have been rather busy with the McCarthys, Tafts, Wherrys and Hickenloopers. But now that these worthies have been rocked back on their heels by the force of dread events, perhaps Messrs. Benton and Barrett could liven up the programming and content of our overseas message.

More than mere information, however truthful, is needed to counteract Soviet headway made in largely taking over and directing local anti-colonial, anti-landlord movements in the Far East. The answer lies in the Point IV concept, but not the puny and piddling program which has been brought forth (and in danger, even so, of defeat in Congress). More is needed than mere technical assistance and a few loans. Disintegrating societies must be treated on a regional basis with a long-term program aimed at improving the physical environment and the flow of goods and services to all the population.

Liberty In Guam

The day before July 1, 1950, the date established long ago for the transfer of the Guam government from naval to civilian auspices, President Truman changed his own order and postponed the transfer.

Ever since 1900, the treaty pledge of the United States to define by statute law the status and rights of the Guamanians has undergone one postponement after another. The Navy consistently has imposed obstacles, as a rule invisible or covert ones; its tactic always has been one of delay. Now, today, with Congress all set to enact the organic law for Guam, comes this renewed postponement.

The postponement of transfer can have no useful, but only a hindering effect upon the Navy's operations concerning Korea or wider areas of combat. By the President's now-postponed transfer order (as by the pending organic act for Guam) the Navy keeps untouched control over all its installations, all its operations internal to Guam, everything pertaining to the Navy. It does not add to the efficiency of the Navy's command to have to continue doctoring the Guamanians, teaching them in the schools, traffic-policing their town streets, etc.

In another aspect, this postponement of the grant of liberty and responsibility to the faithful Guamanians will, if the postponement be continued, injure the position of the United States in the contest with communism which is a contest of principles, not only of weapons and fighting men. Guam became a center of world attention after Pearl Harbor. Its citizens were tortured and butchered by the hundreds by the Japanese, because they remained loyal to the United States.

In partial compensation and recognition, and in fulfillment of the 50-years unfilled treaty pledge, President Truman made it one of his basic policies to free the Guamanians from naval absolutism, to extend civilian administration to them, and to win for them an organic act.

The world knows this record and this committment, and that Guam is the American test case for all of the far Pacific islands which are American-controlled. It is very earnestly to be hoped that President Truman will not extend beyond August 1, 1950, his postponement order for Guam liberty.

Johnson's Boast

Louis A. Johnson, Secretary of Defense, boasted not long ago, if Russia attacked us at 4 a. m. what we would do to Russia at 5 a. m. Recent events make this seem highly questionable.

A great difference between Secretary Johnson and former Secretary James V. Forrestal is that Johnson is a politician first and a Secretary of Defense second, while Forrestal was Secretary of Defense first, last and always. It would be academic to make this comparison now were it not for the tragic fact that so many young American lives will be forfeit to Secretary Johnson's political ambitions.

Secretary Forrestal knew, and courageously stated, that to make the United States safe would require tremendous sacrifices on the part of our people and dislocation of our economy. Secretary Johnson insisted that he was not weakening our defenses, only eliminating waste in our military establishments. There being no question about the waste and the lack of cooperation among the services, the weakening of our military strength has gone on apace, always under the guise of efficiency.

It is to be hoped that from now on Secretary Johnson's primary concern will be to repair the damage already done as quickly as possible and to confine himself to his immediate responsibility—that of Secretary of Defense.

Fairlington Bus

Your issue of July 12 quotes Mr. R. T. Mitchell, vice president and assistant manager of the A. B. & W. bus company, as saying that the residents of Fairlington benefit from the circuitous route through the Parfairfax area by having more frequent service and that a higher fare for Fairlington residents is justified. I submit that the residents of Parkfairfax benefit even more from this system of routing, for Parkfairfax with an estimated population of 5000 receives the more frequent service which is required for Fairlington with an estimated population of 14,000. It appears to be a case of the tail wagging the dog, and I do not see how a higher fare is justified on that basis.

Milk Sterilization

As Senator Robertson has stated, the main issue in the District milk controversy is the preservation of the present supply of high quality of milk at prices which are as low as those in any city in Virginia which he knows. This was proved during my residence in Rome, Italy, where there was a typhoid epidemic about 1935 which crowded the hospitals of that city. Mussolini had established, as one of his show-window reforms, a supposedly hygienic system of milk distribution with white uniformed employes and a new building for the reception and distribution of milk for the entire city and suburbs.

My domestic servant came down with typhoid and had to be hospitalized. I learned from a doctor friend that it had been traced to carelessness and negligence in the sterilization of milk containers. As Rome was supplied by dairy farms near there it was easy to trace the cause of the epidemic at its source.

If the District of Columbia should be supplied with milk by dairy farms all over the United States it would be difficult to trace the source of contaminated milk in case of an epidemic, which would be disastrous to the employes of all branches of our Government working in Washington and its environs. No experimental departure from the present system of milk inspection and marketing, which has been tried and proven entirely satisfactory to resident consumers in the District of Columbia, should be attempted at this time.

Randolph-Macon

I hold an option on the original campus of Randolph-Macon College, here at Boydton, which is well known as the oldest Methodist college in America. The property consists of two of the orginial buildings erected in 1830-32, a modern house, and some 90 acres of land. I hope to see it become a preparatory school for boys. My option is for $31,000.

The troubled state of the world, the threat of war, has disheartened some of the people upon whom I had relied, and unless help is forthcoming in the next few weeks, the property will be cut up for commercial exploitation and forever lost for any future school use. The trustees of Randolph-Macon at their recent board meeting in Ashland, Va., (where the college was moved after the Civil War), received me cordially, but I was told they had no funds.

The noble old buildings that remain have survived war before, and many vicissitudes. They are not a monument to one religious denomination only, they stand as a visible representative of the best traditions of our cultural past. The old chapel retains its original furniture. On its platform, Judge Tyler made the commencement address two years before he became President of the United States.

It may be so—that the times are unpropitious, but if cultural and spiritual values are to survive in the world we must lay the material basis for it.

Boydton is a courthouse village of just 500 people. Perhaps among your readers there may be some with the imagination, and the resources, to aid us in this project. We propose to form a Founders Society, composed of those who wish to make donations and become founders of a new school on this site. The members of the society will elect the trustees and name the school at a future time. I invite all persons of good will, who are interested, to communicate with me.

Director, and Trustee for The New School, Old Randolph-Macon.

Dubious Slum Clearance

Your July 9 real estate section had as its headline "Private Enterprise Takes a Crack at Slum Clearance." The story was an announcement that a section in the 1800 block of T st. nw., was being cleared of its slum dwellings, its tenants having been already evicted. "They readily agreed on learning that housing for Negroes was to replace the dwellings," the news story continues.

Farther on was a more specific statement of the kind of units to be built on the slum-cleared land. They are to consist of one-room "efficiencies" renting at $80, and one-bedroom units renting at $90 a month.

It would be interesting to find out how many of the families evicted from these slums could be comfortable in places of this size, even granting the dubious possibility that they can afford such rents.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Mr. Johnson's Pearl Harbor

ACCORDING to current report, Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, of all people, is now getting ready to step forward as the great advocate of a powerful American defense effort. It is long past time for this quick change, since any reader of the newspapers can now see the direct results of Secretary Johnson's previous appearances in the role of the great economizer.

Perhaps the most poignant comment on Johnson's defense "economies" was contained in a recent report from the Korean front. A shattered American unit, just withdrawn from the battle line, was resting on a rocky hillside. Their exhausted officer spoke for them all, in two brief, bitter sentences.

"You don't fight two tank-equipped divisions with .30-caliber carbines. I never saw such a useless damn war in all my life."

The young soldier had good reason to be bitter as the story of the American armored force will show. There has never been the slightest secret about Soviet armored strength. Russian World War II tanks were consistently better than ours. The huge Russian armored force of over 20,000 tanks was retained on combat status when peace came. And as long as three years ago, Russian output of new tanks was known to have reached 3000 a year, many of them the great 60-ton heavies.

WHEN James V. Forrestal launched his American rearmament program, a vigorous attack on the tank problem was conspicuously included. Even after President Truman sharply cut back the Forrestal program, in November, 1948, appropriations and authorizations were still provided to give this country a respectable armored force. When Johnson took office, the order had already been given for the first step. During 1949, hundreds of our medium tanks were to be equipped with heavier armor and more powerful guns, so that they would at least be fit to meet Russian tanks of equal weight.

Almost at once, however, Johnson announced his "crash" savings program, to cut one billion dollars from the 14 billion dollar defense outlays approved by President Truman and voted by Congress. Tank modernization was one of the first items to be "crashed," being transformed into a Johnsonian "economy" as early as March, 1949. That is why we now have no tanks—literally, none at all—that can defeat the Russian armor in the field.

What is more, this tank story, which should help many puzzled people to understand the course of the Korea fighting, is fairly representative of the way Johnson has fulfilled his promise to "increase the over-all combat capabilities of the armed forces."

In the case of the ground forces, for instance, the 1949 planned strength was 12 divisions, 6 for occupation duty and 6 for a strategic reserve. In 1949 the Marine Corps, so important in situations like that in Korea, was organized on the basis of 11 combat-ready battalions.

UNDER the Johnson crash program, however, two ground force divisions, the Eighth, which was being organized, and the Sixth, which was in being and stationed in Korea, were immediately sacrificed. Several other Army divisions lost their essential guts, by being deprived of infantry battalions, or of their artillery or armored components, or in other ways. And the number of Marine battalions was reduced from 11 to 6. Under pressure, Johnson restored two of these battalions, loudly hailing this backdown as one of his "increases in combat capability."

In the case of the Navy, Johnson's "over-all increase in combat capability" consisted in cutting the fleet at sea from 8 heavy carriers to 6; from 18 cruisers to 13; from 155 destroyers to 140; and so on. When the carrier cut was made, the Joint Chiefs of Staff advised Johnson that this would make it impossible to hold the Mediterranean in case of war. But now that the danger in the Balkans is the chief threat of a third world war, we have had to send two carriers to the Mediterranean, leaving horribly inadequate strength in both Atlantic and Pacific.

In research and development, in the planning and organization of the Atlantic Pact defense, in the Air Forces, whose story is so important as to deserve a second report, the picture has everywhere been the same. Screening all that he did with gross and persistent untruth, the Secretary of Defense crippled this Nation's strength. The results were the Korea attack, and what is happening in Korea today, and the immense world crisis which now confronts us. The question is whether a Defense Secretary who has practiced such a fraud, and who has needed such costly education to grasp the need for a serious defense effort, is the right man to lead that effort in a time of danger at least as great as the danger which confronted us on December 7, 1941.

Phony Peace Appeal

By Marquis Childs

How To Spike The Communist Drive

IN THEORY, at least, we credit the Russian Communists with being pretty hard-boiled operators. We credit them with spending their energies and resources on the practical and immediate goal of world conquest of the peoples of the earth.

Childs

Since this is so, it is time we looked realistically into the reasons why world communism has spent a lot of time and money circulating the so-called Stockholm peace petition. This is the petition that calls for outlawing the atomic bomb and for peace.

It came out of a Communist-controlled peace conference in Stockholm, Sweden, which was the third of a series. The first was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York and the second in Paris. At the Waldorf conference Moscow sent some of her leading intellectuals and musicians as window-dressing to join in the Communist cry for peace.

The Stockholm petitions have been signed by millions of persons in nearly every country of the world. They respond to a passionate hope in the hearts of people everywhere that the world will not once again be torn by a new and more terrible war.

They are being circulated in the United States. Down in Winston-Salem, N. C., which is a long way from Moscow, they were recently handed around by W. A. McGirt, jr., an organizer for the Food, Tobacco, Agricultural and Allied Workers Union. This is a Communist-dominated union ousted from the CIO in February of 1950. It has been striving to control local unions in which there is a high percentage of Negro workers.

IT HAPPENS that the executive editor of the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel is Wallace Carroll. Carroll directed the London branch of the Office of War Information during World War II. He has an understanding of propaganda warfare as it is waged between truth and falsehood.

His reaction to the appearance of the Stockholm peace petitions in his home town was not to say, "Tut, tut, this is bad, wicked, evil!" It was to take the offensive for an honest peace.

The Journal is now circulating an "appeal for a true peace." In the first day or two several hundred signers responded. The appeal as circulated by the Journal is as follows:

"The war in Korea is a danger to the peace of all peoples.

"We believe that the Korean war can be stopped and that peace can be saved if the North Korean forces will obey the United Nations and go back to their starting point.

"We believe that the governments and peoples of the world can persuade them to do this.

"We believe the governments and individuals who proclaim their devotion to peace can prove that devotion by using their influence to stop the Korean war in this way.

"We invite all friends of peace to sign this statement."

THAT petition, or something very like it, should be circulated not in Winston-Salem alone, not in North Carolina alone. It should be circulated in every country where the Iron Curtain doesn't keep it out.

We have nothing like an organized party, such as the Communists have, to do that for us. But, I feel confident, the friends of freedom and true peace in almost every country would take it up if the initiative came from the United States.

That is the trouble and the tragedy. The initiative has not been forthcoming from America. So much that we do is negative and almost always defensive. By default almost we have let communism pick up and pervert such noble words as "peace" and "democracy."

The House Un-American Activities Committee reacts to the Stockholm petitions by crying "Chicanery." How childish and pathetic! Of course, it is chicanery! The whole base of communism is chicanery.

To carry out a peace offensive means the use of brains, resources, energy. A few tired, tragically prejudiced old men in the Congress seem determined to block all efforts to wage peace. When they block a greatly expanded information program, they show themselves almost willfully blind to the challenge of this moment; and almost perversely ignorant of the motives, methods and intentions of the ruthless and realistic men who direct the Communist conspiracy.

disciplining of the instinct to be fecund."

On Saturday Pope Pius predicted that, whether or not people desire it, the next 50 years probably will see greater population transfers than the huge migration to the Americas which has occurred since 1800.

The article in La Civilta Cattolica denied gloomy predictions that overpopulation of the world is likely within the next 75 years and insisted it may never occur. It quoted some economists as calculating that the earth could support almost four times as many persons as it has now.

It said "Anglo-Saxons," evidently meaning Americans as well as English, still control immense areas which are unpopulated or semipopulated. It implied that it is Machiavellian and unChristian to close these areas to emigrants from the prolific nations of Asia and Europe.

Continence, according to the Catholic Encyclopedic Dictionary, is the virtue of resistance against strong movements of sexual desire and also is temporary or permanent abstention from marital intercourse.

Bank of America Is Refused Stay In Contempt Case

Justice Burton of the Supreme Court has refused to stay the civil contempt conviction of Bank of America and Transamerica, Inc., and the presidents of the two corporations.

After listening to more than two hours of legal arguments, Justice Burton said he did not find sufficient ground to justify him in overriding the ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

On July 10 the Circuit Court in San Francisco found the Bank of America and Transamerica, along with the presidents of the two firms, L. M. Giannini and Sam Husbands, respectively, half dozen of their branches.

U. S. to Unload Cotton Stocks As Curb to Wild Price Rise

Soybeans dropped the 10-cent daily limit. Wheat, however, was steady, with flour sales reported heavy. Wheat closed from a fraction to one cent higher, corn ⅛ to ½ cent higher, rye 1½ to 1¾ lower, and lard down 30 to 50 cents a 100 pounds.

Housewives will be interested to learn:

1. Family brands of flour will be 10 cents a sack higher today.

2. Some nylon manufacturers have announced plans to allot their production of stockings during September. Buying stampedes made the action necessary, the trade said, not a shortage of supplies.

3. Raw hides, from which shoes and other leather goods are made, dropped from seasonal highs made Monday.

4. More retail stores followed the lead of A&P., which Monday hiked coffee prices 4 to 5 cents a pound. Kroger stores, a large chain, announced such action at Cincinnati headquarters. Standard Brands announced a 2-cent rise in Chase & Sanborn coffee.

5. Esso Standard Oil Co., which operates in Washington, announced an increase of one-fifth to one half cent a gallon effective right now.

6. Goodrich Tire, Firestone, and General Tife advanced prices from 5 to 7½ percent.

7. A lot of important items dropped. Wholesale coffee was unchanged to 2.2 cents a pound lower. Cocoa, which staged a spectacular rise recently, was down one third to two thirds of a cent a pound. Wool and wool top futures, which spurted Monday, dropped 1 to 3 cents a pound.

8. Black pepper continued up, gaining 10 cents a pound at New York.

9. Even air-conditioning was hot. United States Air Conditioning Corp. announced increases of 10 to 15 percent for its equipment.

10. Pacific Mills in New York increased prices for worsted fabrics by 15 to 30 cents a yard, as a result of increases in raw wool.

Steel Capacity to Rise

In New York the United States Steel Corp. announced plans to increase its steel-making capacity by 1,660,000 tons by the fall of 1951. The corporation said it would start in 1951 to build a new integrated Irving S. Olds said the plans "should prove to be of material help toward meeting the current high demand for many kinds of steel products."

The company now has a capacity of 32 million tons of ingots and steel for castings a year. This is about one-third the national total.

Trigg's announcement was in two parts:

1. Offers from buyers for Government holdings of 1948-crop cotton will be accepted every other day from now on, instead of at periodic intervals. It will be sold for not less than the highest of (1) the total paid out by CCC on the cotton, (2) the domestic market price, and (3) 105 percent of the current support price plus carrying charges.

2. Government loans on cotton, which would be foreclosed ordinarily on July 31, will be extended until September 30. This will give farmers, who have cotton under Government loan, 60 more days to sell their cotton on the market instead of letting it go to the Government in payment for the loan. It is expected that this will induce many farmers to market their stocks within the next few weeks. The Government will urge growers to "give serious consideration to marketing the loan cotton," the announcement says.

Representative Flood (D., Pa) demanded a "full and complete" probe of the recent one-cent increase in the price of bread here.

In so doing, he introduced a resolution that would direct the House District Committee to probe the "unjustified" price hike "with a view to determining whether action by Congress is required to prevent war scare profiteering in the District."

months. The commission has consistently opposed it until the major part of it a competitive examining program was complete. The Korean war and the large-scale hiring plans of the war agencies have changed its views. It now looks upon the prospective order as a quick way to dispose of the remaining war service and many satisfactory temporary persons. The commission could then give more of its time to the No. 1 problem—staffing of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Employes covered by such an order would have to be recommended for status by their agencies; have good or better efficiency ratings, and pass noncompetitive tests.

Barker has been appointed chief of its division of cotton and other fiber crop diseases. . . .Joseph K. Carson, jr., a former member of the Maritime Commission, has been appointed general manager of New York's Propeller Club, an organization that works for an effective merhant marine.

RETIREMENT: A bill (HR 9002) approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee would boost the pensions of persons who retired under State's Foreign Service by the following scale:

Those who retired prior to November 13, 1946, 25 percent or $300 flat, whichever is smaller; those who retired between November 13, 1946, and November 13, 1947, 20 percent or $240; those who retired between November 13, 1947, and November 13, 1948, 15 percent or $180; a 10 percent or $120 boost for those who retired between November 13, 1948, and November 13, 1949, and 5 percent or $60 for retirees between November 13, 1949, and November 13, 1950.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IN THE SPORTS BUSINESS, one man's meat is often another man's poison and in the latter sense that seems to be true for the pro football people who are getting no break in the tight pennant races of the two major leagues.

This is the time of year when the pro football clubs try to get healthy from the sale of season tickets, which represents money in the bank and is a safeguard against late-season loss of interest. The season-ticket sale is a wonderful gimmick for the club owners. They want the public to buy their product before it's worth is even established.

POVICH

The sales-resistance stiffens, though, for the football owners when the baseball races are exciting. Folks are not disposed to be football-minded in July, August and September when they are getting the kind of pennant struggles the National and American Leagues are offering.

For the football owners, the dream summer is when a club in each of the big leagues is making a run-away of the races, and the people are more easily impressed with the nearness of the football season.

AS IT HAPPENS, though, it's a four-club race in each major league. In the NL, it's so close that the standings yesterday showed the fourth-place Dodgers only one game out of the lead. A couple of days ago, the second-place Cardinals got licked and found themselves on top because the league-leading Phils were licked twice. And the next day, the Phils regained the lead simply by being rained out.

The football people get one break, however. The Redskins, for example, have taken 51 players to California for early training and the athletes, except for their exhibition-game salaries don't go on the payroll for a couple of months. It's a nice position for the clubs, but to the college grads who don't make the team and will be dropped off at Denver and waypoints, those two months are a total loss.

The Redskins will lop off 19 rookies. Other teams with 60 or more on their rosters will give the ax to as many as 30. And for the kids who failed, there's not much of a football future. They don't get as good a break as the baseball rookies in a big league camp. The fact that he's with a major club in the spring shows he has talent and can get a job in the minors. There are not enough minor football leagues to take care of the surplus.

THE SALE of season tickets is more important to the Redskins this season. They are losing a lot of that television revenue of the past few years, following the league ruling against live television shows. It knocked the props from under one source of profit for the Redskins who were the only club that stuck to televizing all its home games.

Whatever the argument over television's effect on the attendance may be, the league apparently was convinced that it wasn't helping. That the visiting clubs would not hold still for the Redskins' profits from video was apparent. The home club kept it all, and the visiting teams were taking smaller checks away from Washington where they used to play before capacity crowds.

The Redskins still lead the league in season ticket sales, although they declined the last two seasons from a postwar peak of 26,000. The Washington operation has long been the envy of other clubs. The Detroit Lions, for example, last year set a goal of 5000 season ticket sales in the hope of getting off to a better than usual start.

MANY A REDSKIN season ticket went unused in the later part of 1949, however, when hundreds of fans simply didn't bother to go to what stacked up as unexciting games, with the Redskins out of the Eastern Division title picture. Deprived of their television views of this year's contest, however, they may buy in greater numbers but that may depend on the preseason showing of the Redskins.

In former years, it wasn't important to the Redskins from a sales standpoint whether they lost or won the exhibition games. They were selling as many season tickets as they cared to. But for other clubs, the preseason results directly stimulated or slowed their season ticket sales according to their showings. This year the Redskins can't take too many preseason beatings without worrying over their ticket sales.

The pro football business is looking up, though. The merger with the All-America Conference, which moved such drawing cards as the Cleveland Browns and the San Francisco Forty-Niners into the NL ought to mean better business for every club. But the ballyhoo is being slowed by the high interest in the baseball races. The best thing that could happen for pro football is the collapse of a couple of contenders in each major league, and the worst thing is this kind of a pennant race to the finish.

'Yields' at Bell's Orders

Marshall 'Gives In,' Sends 5 Rookies to All-Star Game

Special to The Washington Post

Los Angeles, July 18—George Marshall, president of the Washington Redskins, reversed his field today—not an unusual procedure for him—and "permitted" five of his rookie players to participate in the College All-Star game at Chicago next month.

Marshall's "permission" came after Bert Bell, National Football League commissioner, today had virtually ordered the five to be on hand for the August 11 game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

"At the request of Commissioner Bell," the ever-willing-to-please Marshall explained, "I'm letting the boys go because Bell feels that it's to the best interest of the All-Star game that they play there. It's still not according to terms of the contract, which says only four from any club must play, but I'm withdrawing my protest if it will help the game."

Earlier, Marshall had said, positively and definitely, that only four of his players would be allowed to go.

And so, with the reluctant blessing of their paymaster, Rookies Eddie LeBaron, Hall Haynes, George Thomas, all backs, and Center Harry Ulinski and Tackle Lou Karas will head for Chicago tomorrow. They'll rejoin Coach Herman Ball & Co. August 12, four days before the Redskins meet the Los Angeles Rams in their first exhibition game of the season.

With that problem squared away, Coach Ball turned his attention to the more important on-the-field activity of making three player shifts.

He shifted Fullback Ed Quirk from fullback to offensive center, sent Halfback Rob Goode to fullback and moved Ed Berrang from right end to left end.

He envisions Quirk, a 230-pounder, as a fine offensive pivotman, what with his blocking ability rated among the best. Goode, Ball thinks, could become a "great fullback." The big Texan runs a 10 second hundred despite his 210 pounds. Berrang, Ball thought, was too good an end to battle Joe Teresehnski for left end.

Robinson Fined $1000

Scranton, Pa., July 18 (AP).—Sugar Ray Robinson was fined $1000 today by the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission for failure to keep a 15-round engagement against Jose Basora here tomorrow night.

The action was taken by Commission Chairman George J. Jones, jr., several hours after Robinson had signed a contract to defend his world welterweight title August 9 against Charley Fusari at Jersey City for the benefit of the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund. Robinson will donate all except one dollar of his share of the purse to the fund.

Jones also ordered Robinson to reimburse Promoter Ernest Gennell for expenses incurred to date in promoting the bout. The fight was to be for the Pennsylvania version of the middleweight title now held by Sugar Ray. Gennell said his expenses might run as high as $5000.

Cards Stop Dodgers, Tie Braves, Phils For Lead

St. Louis, July 18 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals turned the tables on the Brooklyn Dodgers tonight, taking an early lead and a 5 to 3 decision behind the seven-hit pitching of Al Brazle.

The Cardinals' victory put them in a three-way tie for first place in the National League with the Philadelphia Phillies, who split a doubleheader, and the Boston Braves, who defeated Pittsburgh in an afternoon contest.

Brooklyn is one and a half games behind the pacesetters.

It was the first victory in eight games for St. Louis—they last beat the Dodgers June 1.

All the Redbird runs were in the fourth inning. With one out, Red Schoendienst walked. Stan Musial singled off Erv Palica and Enos Slaughter doubled, scoring Schoendienst. Bill Howerton was walked intentionally and Eddie Miller singled, scoring Musial and Slaughter. Del Rice also singled, Howerton crossing the plate.

Brazle closed the scoring with a single, scoring Miller.

The Dodgers pushed their first run across in the fifth on Roy Campanella's double, scoring Furillo from second. They threatened in the ninth when, with two out, Jackie Robinson singled and Carl Furillo followed with a four-bagger.

Except for the five hits and five runs in the fourth Palica had the Cards under control. Joe Landrum relieved him in the eighth, allowing one hit.

Except for the ninth Brazle appeared to have things going the way he wanted. Three doubleplays helped him out of possible trouble.

Spahn Checks Pirates, 11-3

Pittsburgh, July 18 (AP).—Boston's Warren Spahn mastered the Pittsburgh Pirates for the first time this season today as he allowed the Bucs six hits in gaining an 11-3 victory before 5445 fans.

Three Pittsburgh pitchers gave the Braves 14 hits, including Walker Cooper's tenth home run with two aboard in the second. The Pirate infield contributed three errors for five unearned Boston runs in the fourth.

Gus Bell, rookie Buc outfielder, collected his fifth fourbagger of the season in the seventh. Ralph Kiner scored ahead of him.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the first when Stan Rojek scored on a fielder's choice, but Cooper's homer in the second put Boston ahead. The Braves added another run in the third when Sid Gordon singled, scoring Williard Marshall.

The Braves made it 9-1 in the wild fourth. Buddy Kerr scored in the fifth when Ralph Kiner and Wally Westlake let Hartsfield's long fly drop between them.

Phils Snap Back, Beat Cubs in 2d

Chicago, July 18 (AP).—Bill Serena's ninth and tenth home runs of the season plus a seven-hit performance by Paul Minner gave the Chicago Cubs a 5-to-2 victory over Philadelphia today. But the Phillies knocked Bob Rush out of the box and slammed out an 8-to-3 triumph in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Cubs made 14 hits off Robin Roberts and Ken Johnson to the delight of a paid crowd of 28,861 in the first game. They made 13 of their hits and all their runs off Roberts, who pitched six innings.

The Phillies blasted Bob Rush off the mound in the second inning of the second game. They continued the assault against Johnny Vander Meer, Johnny Schmitz and Dutch Leonard until they had piled up 18 hits, including Puddin' Head Jones' nineteenth homer of the season.

Bassler Fires 138, Wins Maryland Open Again

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Charley Bassler, pro at the Rolling Road Country Club, Catonsville, Md., won the Maryland State Open golf title yesterday at Columbia Country Club with a two-under-par 138 for 36 grueling holes.

It was his second Maryland Open title in three years, and his score was the lowest in the 294-year history of the tournament.

Bassler, second to Jack Isaacs' course record-breaking 66 at the halfway mark, added a 71 in the afternoon of his morning 67 to beat par by two strokes for the 36 holes. He won $225 and a medal.

Bassler now holds the Maryland, District of Columbia and Baltimore Open titles. He won the Maryland crown in 1948. Last year he came in second to Isaacs.

After Bassler had posted his 138 total, Isaacs, defending titlist from Langley Field, Va., still had four holes to play. He needed one under par from that point to tie but flubbed every chance.

Isaacs also went over par on the last hole to finish in a three-way tie for second with Bobby Brownell, five-time District Amateur champion from Chevy Chase club and Harold Cross, sporting goods salesman from Washington. Cross

Lemon Hurt But Wins, 10-2

Philadelphia, July 18 (AP).—Forced out of action with a hand injury, Bob Lemon nevertheless got credit for his fourteenth pitching victory tonight as Cleveland trounced Philadelphia, 10-2.

Lemon was struck on his pitching hand by a line drive through the box from Rookie Shortstop Kermit Wahl's bat in the seventh inning. The injury was not serious and Lemon will be able to take his regular mound turn.

Al Rosen hit his twenty-seventh homer of the year tto take the major league lead.

Griffs Fail To Get Hit in Last 6 After Early Flurry

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats threw a quick one-two punch at the White Sox last night and beat 'em 5 to 2 with the victory the sweeter because their victim was Ray Scarborough, formerly in the hire of the Washington club.

They dispatched Mr. Scarborough in four innings, jolting him for all of their runs in the first two innings and handing Sandalio Consuegra a lead which he protected with some magnificence all through the contest to collect his fourth victory against two losses.

And it was well that they collected those five rapid runs off Scarborough because in their last six innings they couldn't muster any kind of a hit or a run against their erstwhile pal and Luis Aloma, who pitched the last four frames.

Actually, the White Sox outhit the Nats, 10 to 6, but the spindle-legged Consuegra scattered those White Sox hits almost to his own liking. He gave up two runs in the fifth and refused to yield any more. He was whipping his fast curve over the plate with superb control. He didn't walk anybody.

Tighten Hold on 5th

The game was witnessed by 6827 customers and it was a nice one for the Nats to win inasmuch as it gave them a four-game bulge over the White Sox and solidified their hold on fifth place.

They attacked Scarborough before he could get squared away, wrenched two runs out of him in the first inning and followed up with three more that were sort of luck anointed in the second. Thereafter, they were a feeble crew, and the only Nats who reached base were the four who walked against Aloma in the last four innings.

Scarborough's first mistake was a walk to Eddie Yost to start the Nats' first inning, and he was in deep trouble when Noren beat out an infield hit with one out. His next act was to wild pitch the runners up a base. Vernon got the first run home with a long fly to Rickert, and Stewart singled to right for the second run.

The Nats' three-run fifth started innocently enough with Mickey Grasso's single to center with one out. Scarborough fanned Consuegra for the second out, but Yost jolted him for a single to left.

Then the Nats got a break when Gil Coan, attempting to withdraw his bat from a bad pitch, accidently lofted a two-bagger to short left scoring Grasso and moving Yost to third. Whereupon Irv Noren contributed a solid single to right for the second and third runs of the inning.

Consuegra was unscored on despite three Chicago hits in the

Mize Socks 2 Homers as Yanks Romp

New York July 18 (AP).—Rotund Johnny Mize crashed two home runs and two singles, driving in four runs, to lead the New York Yankees to a 12-1 romp over the St. Louis Browns today. Tommy Byrne walked two and fanned eight to register his 10th victory against four losses.

A crowd of 8,092 saw the world champs crush two former teammates—Don Johnson and Dick Starr—with 16 hits. Gene Woodling capped a six-run fifth inning with an inside-the-park homer with two mates on.

Hank Bauer and Larry Berra contributed three singles each as the Yanks dealt Johnson his first setback against three victories.

Mize, who had a perfect day at bat busted homer No. 4 in the third inning with Phil Rizzuto on base. Bauer was on when the 36-year-old slugger duplicated in the fifth inning. The four safeties sent Mize's batting average to .303.

Recreation's Plan to Take Over Put Off

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The D. C. Recreation Board's plan to take over operation of the local public golf courses received a severe setback yesterday.

After tentatively approving it three weeks ago, the District Commissioners withdrew their request to Congress for a $275,000 appropriation that would have given the Recreation Board the wherewithal to get started in the golf business.

Recreation had high hopes of taking over next January 1. Now, it isn't likely it will be able to until January 1, 1952, at the earliest.

Disappointed by the Commissioners' action, Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of the Recreation Department, said, "We're anxious to move in as soon as possible. We've worked for nearly two years on this golf problem and, naturally, are looking forward to its completion.

Wender Also Unhappy

"We'll resubmit our proposal to the Commissioners in September and hope, by then, to be able to remove all objections."

Harry S. Wender, Recreation Board chairman who has led the drive to take the golf concession from S. G. Leoffler, operator since 1921, also was unhappy.

Wender said he still had hope that the Commissioners will change their minds and submit the $275,000 appropriations request at this session of Congress.

He explained that under Leoffler's present contract, the Recreation Board will have to start its operation at the begining of the calendar year. If it has to wait until the end of 1951, Wender estimates a loss of profits at from $50,000 to $100,000.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler explained the Commissioners' action by saying, "Too many details remain to be straightened out. The whole thing is a complicated business."

Approved Three Weeks Ago

Fowler also explained that the tentative approval was given three weeks ago because it was the deadline for getting supplementary appropriations to Congress. It was given with the understanding that it could be withdrawn if the Commissioners weren't satisfied with all arrangements.

One thing the Commissioners want to know is what the final agreement on the courses will be between the Recreation Board and the Interior Department. Representatives of Recreation and Interior have been holding meetings off and on for six months.

They also want more definite plans from the Recreation Board on its entire proposed operation. One of the leading questions, remaining unanswered, is the sum needed to liquidate Leoffler's assets.

The Recreation Board's request for $275,000 included the sum of $100,000 for working capital. It felt that it could buy out Leoffler for considerably less than the remaining $175,000.

Leoffler told The Washington Post last March that he would be willing to quit. All he wanted was to be paid off approximately $232,000. He figured the sum he advanced for the Fort Dupont course and clubhouse at $80,000 and said he had all his equipment appraised at $152,000.

Loeffler Touring Europe

Leoffler couldn't be reached for comment. His office said he was touring Europe with his wife and granddaughter. Date of his return was said to be indefinite because he took his car with him.

That car, a $3697 Cadillac, figured in sensational testimony before a House Public Lands Subcommittee investigating the golf setup here in the spring of 1949.

James E. Schwab, member of the Recreation Board golf committee, pointed out that the car was purchased out of operating expenses for the golf course and had 15,000 miles on it although it was less than a year old. Schwab testified that Leoffler took the car to Kansas on personal business.

After two years of the public links controversy, Leoffler still is the operator. And he now works under a more favorable agreement. His salary has been boosted $3000 to $11,500 and the rates at the courses have been boosted 37 percent with the approval of the Recreation Board and Interior Department.

Cameo Loses 7-6, 3 Teams Tie for Lead

McCann Hits Home Run For Naiman's

Naiman's came up with a three-run seventh inning to hand Cameo a 7-6 defeat, its first in second half play, in The Washington Post-Industrial League yesterday.

The defeat dropped Cameo into a three-way tie with Heurich and Sunnybrook for the league lead.

Second baseman Huck McCann paced Naiman's with a three-run homer and a run-producing single.

Firemen Douse Marines, 8 to 1

D. C. Fire Department easily turned back Headquarters Marines, 8-1, yesterday on the East Ellipse to vault into a first-place tie with Naval Receiving in the Recreation League.

Paul Schaefer pitched the Firemen to their victory and added a two-run triple for good measure. It was the fourth win in five starts in the league's second-half play for the smokeaters. Jerry Shine and Bob Lamon each had two for three to aid the winning attack.

first inning. Carrasquel and Ricket singled, and with one out Zernial delivered a single to center but nothing but grief came of it for the Sox. Philley, who was playing it cautiously to begin with, finally was waived toward the plate from second base, and Dente relayed the ball from Noren to nip him with a throw to Grasso.

In the fifth, the Sox were threatening to get more than the two runs they eventually scored. Baker and Fox opened up with singles, and pinch-hitter Gordon Goldsberry banged a single to right that scored Baker.

Double Play Helps

In the crisis, Consuegra tightened nicely. He fed Carrasquel a double-play pitch which Yost grabbed up and routed around the bases as Fox scored from third. But the innards went out of the uprising when Philley grounded to Dente for the third out.

In the next three innings, the little Cuban righthander dueled his countryman, Aloma, on even terms giving up no runs at all, and only one hit—that an infield single by Baker in the seventh.

There was a flurry of excitement in the ninth when Eddie Robinson singled to right with one out, and Floyd Baker singled to right with two out, but Consuegra got two quick strikes over on Nelson Fox and then got rid of him on a grounder to Vernon.

IN SHORT . . . Bucky Harris will experiment today in his pitching department and unveil 6-and-a-half foot Jim Pearce in his first start. Randy Gumpert, Chisox right-hander, will oppose him . . . Harris is now definitely committed to playing Sam Mele only against left-handed pitching, until Mele wholly recovers from bruises . . . The Nats were delighted to knock Ray Scarborough out of the box last night. They accused him of dusting off too many batters the last time they faced him . . . When Eddie Yost singled to left in the second inning, it was his first hit beyond the infield in his last 27 times at bat.

Bassler Wins Maryland Open With 138; Isaacs Shoots 66 twice was runnerup for the Pennsylvania amateur title.

Isaacs had 66-75—141; Brownell, 72-69—141 and Cross 71-70—141.

In a sudden death playoff for the top amateur spot, Brownell defeated Cross on the second extra hole, sinking a nine footer for a par four after Cross missed a shorter one.

George Fazio, Woodmont club pro, a heavy pretournament favorite, played his first round in almost a month and struggled to post 70-73—143.

Fazio, who last month tied for the National Open title after a playoff with Ben Hogan and Lloyd Mangrum, was tied by Andy Gibson of Baltimore, a former champion, with 72-71—143; Clarke Emery, his assistant, 72-71—143; and Boots Widener, pro at Fort Meade, Md., with 70-73—143. Each won $75.

Bassler knocked in club-length putts for consecutive birdies on the fifth, sixth and seventh holes. He added another on the fourteenth and chipped in still another on the eighteenth green. He offset two of these birdies with bogies on par-three, fourth and the short thirteenth.

In the afternoon, Bassler three-putted the second hole to go one over par in a hurry. He missed par again on the fourth. But he dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the seventh and reached the par-five 12th for another birdie. Bassler went over on the 15th, or 33rd, but it didn't matter.

Isaacs, Virginia Open titlist, couldn't do anything wrong his first round. Typical of his play was the 425 yard, par four, second hole, when he dropped a 14-foot putt for a birdie.

He birdied the seventh with an 11-footer to finish the outgoing nine with a one-under 34.

Returning, Isaacs was even hotter. He birdied the 13th with a ten-footer, the 16th by dropping his tee shot less than a foot from the pin on the 154-yard hole and sinking the putt, and the 18th by sinking an eight-foot putt.

Isaacs' second round was a reversal of the first. He bogied the 2d, 6th, 8th and 9th, all by missing putts of six feet or less.

On the final nine holes he blew putts of less than five feet on every one of the last four holes.

Miss Feller Wins

Miss Rebecca Feller won the selected nine-hole tournament at Bethesda Country Club yesterday with 48—13—35. Mrs. D. J. Robertson was runnerup with 49—12—37.

Giants Get Seven Off Howie Fox

Cincinnati, July 18 (AP).—Cincinnati, red-hot Reds managed only two hits off Monte Kennedy today but one was Virgil Stallcup's fifth home run and the Redlegs shaded the New York Giants, 1-0. Howard Fox, who gave up seven hits, was the winner.

Stallcup's winning shot over the left field fence came in the third inning. Ted Kluszewski got the other safe hit off luckless Kennedy in eighth inning, beating out an infield roller to first base.

The New Yorkers had numerous chances against Fox, but the right-hander refused to crack and stranded eight runners. It was his fourth victory against six setbacks.

The Giants blew a fine chance in the seventh. With one out and New York runners on second and third, Connie Rayan pulled the hidden ball trick and tagged Kennedy out at second. Don Muller bunted out, and the Giants never came close after that.

The Reds now have 9 of their last 11 games. The Giants, on the other hand, have dropped 10 of their last 12.

Fishing Luck Bad? Fear Not, Our Man Knows Places to Go

By Ralph Murdock

IF YOU are one of our local anglers who are suffering from the malady diagnosed as "fish scarcitis" we suggest the following areas for relief.

Murdock

Rehoboth Beach.—Boats leave from Lewes, Delaware, approximately 130 miles from Washington. Enormous catches of porgies and sea bass are being taken daily. Tide means little to these hearty feeders. At the present, bluefish are as scarce as hen's teeth. The porgies bite the best at the shipwrecks, about eight miles out. Average weight two pounds.

The sea bass are usually located about 30 miles off shore. This party of eight local anglers which included Harvey Lowe, Pat O'Flinn, Mr. and Mrs. George McCarty, Zygmond Humin, Lewis Sullivan, Vivian Foust and Jerry Jones hauled in 468 of the latter species. The skipper was Capt. Harry Parsons of Lewes, Del.

A little south of Lewes is Ocean City, Md. The majority of the local anglers who frequent this resort usually indulges in Marlin fishing. To date about 30 of these fighters have been landed. Capt. George Willis of Arlington, Va., nailed the first one of the season when he latched onto a 55 pounder and boated it.

OTHER LOCALS to catch one were Henry A. Gardner, jr., Paul Skelly and last but not least, Mrs. W. W. Eaton who brought in a beauty that scaled 57 pounds. A recent report from this area states that the blues are running good, a little smaller than the first run. Many of the boats also fish for porgies and sea bass at this location.

Down Norfolk way, especially in the Hampton Roads area hardheads are reported plentiful. This run seldom hit the 1 and one half pound mark, but plenty of 'em.

The hot spot at the moment is jus east of the Big Mo Hole—the new channel dug to free the big carrier from its recent embarassing nose dive in the mud. It's our opinion these small hardheads will eventually find their way into the upper Chesapeake Bay—if the nets don't snag 'em first.

H. S. Choate, 4432 N. 16th st., Arlington Va., who entered a twenty-one three quarter inch (length) hardhead in Anacostia Sport Marts fishing contest has been warded first prize for his effort. The prize was $20 worth of merchandise at the above store.

THE SECOND PRIZE went to Bill Jordan, 4650 Hillside rd., se. The latter entry was a croaker that measured 20¾ inches in length, good for $10 worth of merchandise. Both of the prize-winning hardheads were taken near Solomon's Island. The contest started on June 15 and ended on July 15.

Other winners were Marvin Mullikin, Robert Hackett, Giles Marble, Ken Norriss, Asa Goff, H. J. Feaster, Charles Draper, Andy Lumpkin, C. J. Martin and Joe E Brown. Oddly enough only one of the above winners caught his winning fish in the Chesapeake Bay. The balance were taken in the Patuxent and Potomac Rivers. How times have changed.

Ed Davis, proprietor of the Anacostia Sport Mart, says, "Come in and get your awards, you lucky anglers."

Milk Prices Here Lower Than in 26 Other Cities

But Report Shows Most Such Places Are Distant From Production Areas

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Agriculture Department tossed a highly explosive comparison of milk prices in more than 100 American cities into the raging argument over proposals to modernize the Washington milk regulations yesterday.

The report shows that Washington prices for milk delivered at the doorstep of 19½ to 20½ cents a quart is exceeded in 26 cities. Most of these are cities distant from a sufficient milk-producing area, such as Miami, Jacksonville, Birmingham, Mobile, New Orleans, etc. Fourteen are in the South and several import their milk more than 1000 miles.

The report came as a House District subcommittee wrangled over the relative merits of inspection regulations set up under the 25-year-old law governing milk in the District and the modernized milk code of the Public Health Service.

8 Cities Pay More to Farmer

The Agriculture Department report also showed that only eight of the more than 100 cities pay more to the farmer for fluid milk than the $5.68 per 100 pounds paid in the Washington milkshed. These are Birmingham, Ala., $5.91; Mobile, $6.06; Jacksonville, $6.50; Miami, $6.46 Savannah, Ga., $5.86; Augusta and Portland, Me., $5.70; and Newport, R. I., $5.92. A hundred pounds of milk represents roughly 46 quarts.

This means that dairy farmers in the local milkshed are being paid more than 12 cents a quart for the fluid milk that retails at 20½ cents. This is a larger proportion of the retail dollar than any other group of farmers in the country enjoys. It indicates superior bargaining abilities on the farm of the Maryland Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Two witnesses from the PHS appeared, Mark Hollis, assistant surgeon-general, and A. W. Fuchs, chief of the Milk and Food Branch. Under questioning they declared that the District code doesn't protect the Washington milk supply as well as the PHS code would. Both indorsed a new District milk bill introduced by Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Nebr.) a Nebraska doctor. That bill would (1) substitute the PHS code for the present milk regulations, and (2) permit milk to be imported into the District from other milksheds in times of shortage.

Continues Today

The House group adjourned until 10 a. m., today, after a morning of argument between Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) from the nearby dairying country, and Miller, with some questing by Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), a supporter of the present law.

In addition to the House hearings, two other discussions of modernization of the local code will take place soon:

1. Thursday at 10 a. m. the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee on prices, headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) will review its probe. Gillette is expected to devote some time to questions about proposed increases in milk prices here next month.

2. The District Commissioners will resume their hearings a week from today into proposals to rewrite the local milk regulations. Chief controversy is substituting sterilization of farm milk utensils in chemical solutions for steam sterilization as at present.

The Agriculture Department's milk report stated that "21 markets, about one in every five, indicated higher retail milk prices early in July. Twenty-four mark-

Of 'Exploitation'
Unit Report Clears GI Trade Schools

Private trade schools here were cleared of charges that they have exploited veterans studying under the GI Bill of Rights, by an investigating committee report released yesterday by the Commissioners.

The report was submitted five months ago by Committee Chairman Leon Chatelain, jr. It stirred up a controversy within the committee that finally boiled over into public view yesterday at a two-hour discussion with the Commissioners.

Chatelain's committee of 18 representatives of business, labor and public agencies was created a year ago today. It was to investigate charges reported by the District Apprenticeship Council that some 30 or so schools here were (1) failing to give adequate training, and (2) turning out more graduates than the economy could absorb.

Seven Members Sign It

Signed by only seven members, the report stated that the schools perform "a useful and hitherto unavailable service", and that there was "no basis for concluding that (these) schools . . . are exploiting G. I.'s". It did not touch on the question of job availability.

Chatelain admitted that several labor and Apprenticeship Council members had not seen the report before it went to the Commissioners. He said attendance at meetings had been poor, and that it was finally decided at a meeting which most of these members did not attend, to draft a report based on the views of a majority present. Other members said they did not see the report until it was sent to them by the Commissioners last week.

Fail to Approve

None of the labor or Apprenticeship Council members approved the report.

Lewis C. Palmer, speaking for the Washington Building Trades Council, told the Commissioners there was "really no investigation made at all". He said he was authorized to quote absent member Clement F. Preller, president of the Central Labor Union, as terming the report a "whitewash."

James J. O'Connor, president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, branded Chatelain's method of preparing and submitting the report "highhanded". Other members said the only part of the report they agreed with was a recommendation that the committee be discharged.

Gino J. Simi, Director of Apprenticeship for the District, said he felt every student of the trade schools had been exploited and that the work of the school was not "worth a damn."

Seeks to Deny Charges

Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools, sought to deny Simi's charge by quoting statistics indicating large numbers of graduates from several schools are now working in the trades for which they were trained. He also pointed out that the schools offer Negroes opportunities that cannot adequately be provided elsewhere.

The public school system must approve and supervise the private schools operating under the G. I. bill.

Claude H. Woodward, director of the Better Business Bureau, said he felt such charges should be filed with the Board of Education. The board had received only 31 complaints in five years, he said.

John J. Corson, speaking for Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, said Graham felt the question of job availability and the relative merits of trade school vs. on-the-job training were not matters on which the committee should rule.

The Commissioners took the question of the report and what to do with it under advisement.

$40,540 Loss On Joint Fares Cited by CTC

Transit Asks ICC For Use of D. C. Fare On Virginia Runs

The Capital Transit Co. is losing $40,540 a year on joint fare passengers carried between the Pentagon, other Government buildings in Virginia and the District, the firm's spokesman testified yesterday.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller, told an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing that it costs "at least" 13.45 cents to transport persons within the District, while the company share of the joint fare has been set at seven cents.

CTC is asking for authority to charge its regular District fares for its part of the joint runs. This would mean 15 cents cash, three tokens for 40 cents or the $2 weekly pass.

Heberle said the $40,540 a year loss on the runs was a minimum. He personally felt $44,940 was a more correct estimate, he emphasized. The lower figure was based on the recently authorized 6.4 percent rate of return and the other was tied to a 10 percent rate.

The CTC official declared that it was his considered view that a 10 percent figure was necessary to assure both investors and consumers of adequate capital to carry out the firm's operations properly. The Public Utilities Commission of the District set the 6.4 percent rate in the firm's recent fare increase case.

Heberle emphasized that the service given passengers tendering joint fare tickets was the same as that for all District passengers and cost just as much to provide, yet the company received a much smaller amount from such patrons.

The hearing will resume today at 9:30 a. m. before Examiner H. C. Lawton with cross examination of Heberle.

Before Heberle took the stand, representatives of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. and the Washington, Virginia and Maryland (Arnold) Bus Line testified in favor of a 15-cent fare for their share of the trips. They joined CTC in urging the end of the joint fare scheme.

Under present fares, the ABW line revenues declined $190,000 during the first five months of 1950 compared with the same period in 1949, ABW Auditor George R. Snyder testified.

Operating costs, particularly labor, have been rising steadily, Bernard A. Wahle, executive vice president and general manager of the WVM, told the hearing.

Park Police Acquire Trailer For Mobile Field Headquarters

Park police have a new emergency headquarters on wheels—a 30-foot aluminum trailer stripped of all the usual trailer furnishings except an icebox.

It was acquired by the Department of Interior for $2550, to be used as a mobile headquarters by park police on details to inaccessible areas.

The new trailer, which will be completely fitted in about two weeks, will be rigged with two-way radio, a first-aid station and all the equipment needed for rescue operations.

It will pull its own power wagon, which will contain a 7500-watt generator to supply power for floodlights, a public address system, the radio and icebox.

According to Inspector Mark Raspberry of the Park Police, the need for such a unit was emphasized last November when 55 persons were killed in the midair crash here of an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 and a fighter plane flown by a Bolivian pilot.

Park Police, on continuous duty at the scene of the crash for more than 24 hours, were handicapped by the lack of necessary equipment and communications facilities.

The new vehicle was used last week in policing the circus grounds. In the future, said Raspberry, it will operate at such functions as the President's Cup Regatta, the Cherry Blossom Festival and the Fourth of July fireworks display.

When not in use it will be kept at the trailer camp at Hains Point.

Court Dismisses 'Posse' Case Involving Viers Mill Gunfire

When the urge to visit a lady friend strikes a fellow at two in the morning anything can happen. He can duck shots from a squirrel rifle.

He and his friends can get arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

So it was in the Viers Mill Village "posse action" of July 6, a matter which was aired yesterday before Trial Justice William B. Wheeler and a capacity audience in Silver Spring Police Court.

Maid Misplaced

Judge Wheeler found the evidence all very "confusing" and dismissed disorderly conduct charges against four men who were accused of rousing Viers Mill Village residents early in the morning during their search for a misplaced nursemaid.

The four are Charles F. Clark, 29, of 101 Franklin ave.; Donald M. Heizer, jr., 22, of 205 E. Wayne ave., and William F. Hauptman, 23, of 715 Dale dr., all of Silver Spring, and Joseph J. Olenik, 22, of 6611 Clarendon dr., Bethesda.

The judge also dismissed a similar charge against Thomas Newell, 27, of 4508 Sigsbee rd., Viers Mill Village, who was alleged to have fired a shot from a .45 caliber revolver at the feet of the intruders.

Testimony brought out that Clark, accompanied by his three friends, was looking for Mrs. Harriet Roberts, who has been a nursemaid for several women in Viers Mill Village.

Banged on Door

Mrs. Ruby Frances Anders, of 4505 Sigsbee rd., testified that two men started banging on her front door sometime after 2 a. m. on July 6.

When she put her head out the window, she said, they demanded to see "Harriet." Mrs. Anders said she told the men Harriet was in West Virginia but the men kept pounding her door.

Mrs. Anders declared she armed herself with a .22 caliber rifle she uses to hunt squirrels, went outside and fired several shots in the air.

Within minutes, it developed, the entire neighborhood had been aroused, and Clark, Heizer, Hauptman and Olenik were herded to the side of the street to await the arrival of police.

Mrs. Anders cleared up that matter of Harriet. She said the girl used to live with her and cared for her children. Then, last December, she had married a soldier. As Mrs. Harriet Black Roberts she returned to the neighborhood (across the street at 5404 Sigsbee rd.) to care for the child of Mrs. Audrey Banks.

Husband in Oklahoma

Mrs. Roberts, about 30, tall, thin-faced and wearing horn-rim glasses, testified she had been working for Mrs. Banks since April. Her husband, she said, is stationed at Fort Sill, Okla. She said she has known Clark for about 8 months.

"Have you had dates with him?" asked Clark's attorney.

She hesitated. "Yes," she replied, adding that she had gone to town and the movies with him several times.

She said Clark had called on her several times at the homes of both Mrs. Banks and Mrs. Anders.

The young nursemaid testified she was in West Virginia with Mrs. Banks the night of the Viers Mill Village furore. But earlier, not expecting to make the trip, she had told Clark she would probably stay at the home of Mrs. Anders while Mrs. Banks was away, she added.

Testimony Upheld

Newell's claim that he fired a shot at the feet of Hauptman because the latter "lunged" at him was upheld by a neighbor, Walter E. Schultz, of 4513 Sigsbee rd.

In dismissing the charge against Newell, Judge Wheeler declared any man has the right to defend his home.

Mrs. Anders identified Clark as one of the men who rapped on her door, but Hauptman said he was the one who rapped and that he went to the door alone.

In dismissing the charges against the four, Judge Wheeler cautioned them against "running around and acting like smart alecks."

"These people," he said, "have a right not to be disturbed and if you continue you're likely to get shot. They have a right to defend their property."

Appeal of Segregation Case Runs Into Legal Tangle

The District's attempt to appeal the restaurant segregation decision probably has been stymied for lack of legal grounds, it was learned yesterday.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said progress that had been made in preparing the appeal was stopped cold Monday after an interracial group demanded service for Negroes at Sholl's Cafeteria, 511 14th st. nw.

Defense Attorney Ringgold Hart, who had been cooperating with the District in seeking an avenue for appeal, then refused to sign a necessary stipulation, West said.

Hart is attorney for Thompson's Restaurant, defendant in the earlier case which resulted in Municipal Court Judge Frank J. Myers' ruling last week that the restaurant anti-segregation law of 1873 had been repealed "by implication." He is also attorney for the Restaurant Association of Washington.

Hart admitted that the association was irked by the Sholl's episode.

"We know that this issue must be decided by a higher court," Hart said. "But if we're going to cooperate with the District, we want protection for our property."

He denied, however, that the Sholl's incident was responsible for his refusal to sign the stipulation. The reason he did not sign, Hart said, was the fact that the stipulation did not correctly describe the proceedings.

The stipulation was to state that Judge Myers ruled on a motion to dismiss, West said, because the Government cannot appeal a decision based on the merits of a case. Hart, however, holds the case was judged on its merits and that by signing the stipulation as worded he would be agreeing to something that was not so.

"The more I study it," Hart said, "the more convinced I am that the District can't get to the Court of Appeals with this case." West seemed inclined to agree that under the circumstances it probably could not. He would not say whether the District intends to pick another test case.

Hearing on the charges against the 13 persons arrested at Sholl's is scheduled to be held this morning in Municipal Court, according to Assistant Corporation Counse. Clark King.

Falls Church Citizens Lash At Annexation

Panel Hears Attacks On Proposal to Take Over Fairfax Sector

A parade of Falls Church witnesses hostile to the city's annexation hopes yesterday criticized city storm drainage, roads, police force, and the dearth of sidewalks.

Falls Church's acquisition of 10.75 square miles of adjacent Fairfax County just isn't feasible financially, they told the three-judge panel hearing the annexation suit in Fairfax Circuit Court.

Today, the court will hear final arguments from both county and city, with a two and one-half hour limit for each side. Following that, the three judges conceivably could give their verdict.

Typical of the city critics was Dr. Macon Ware, retired druggist of 108 Jefferson st., Falls Church.

Said he: "The city is entirely incapable of taking care of more territory at this time." His prime target was the road system which he called "deplorable"—particularly his own street.

Joel Harris, 205 S. Washington st., complained of flooding due to poor drainage at his Falls Church motor court and restaurant. And he added: "If they (Falls Church) can't take care of the problems they have, why ask for more trouble?"

The same argument came from Mrs. Merrill Lee Chanel, 505 W. Broad st., a city councilwoman in 1948-49. She admitted she had voted for the annexation in 1949 but was "very much against it" now.

Falls Church police were criticized by Bradford Jackson, an employe at the Pearson Funeral Home in Falls Church. City police often "don't show up" when he requests escort for a funeral cortege, he said, but "we have never been disappointed by the Fairfax police."

Attorneys for the city later put two witnesses on the stand to evaluate the worth of four Fairfax County schools located either within Falls Church or in the proposed annexation belt.

W. Selden Washington, Alexandria area estate broker, set the total worth at $940,852. Arlington realtor Carroll Wright estimated $933,071. Both estimates were about $400,000 lower than those of two expert witnesses who testified for the county last week.

Brothers Burned, One Critically, in Blow Torch Blast

An exploding blow torch late yesterday squirted searing gasoline flames on two brothers preparing to repaint the back porch of their mother's home at 1304 Massachusetts ave. se.

Burned over his entire body and in critical condition at Casualty Hospital was Melvin Berry, 35, of 230 W st. ne., an employe of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

His brother, Reginald, 30, was in serious condition at Casualty with third degree burns on his face, back, shoulder and arms. He lives at 1623 C st. se., and works for the Coast Guard.

Their mother, Mrs. Blanche E. Berry, was slightly burned on the fingers when she attempted to pull blazing clothes off her sons.

The blast occurred shortly after 6 p. m.

D. C. Crime Unit Backs Counsel In Fund Wrangle

Questions About Fishbach Color Account Group's Action on Money

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Hyman L. Fischbach, counsel of the House District crime investigation, has been under fire by some members of the House Accounts subcommittee, but it appeared last night he was on solid ground with his employers, the District Crime subcommittee.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), member of the crime subcommittee and Fischbach's sponsor, said yesterday he was backing the chief investigator to the hilt.

Fischbach

"I am still supporting him," said Smith, adding he was not impressed by "all this hearsay" about Fischbach.

(The District Crime Subcommittee is a unit of the House District Committee. The Accounts Subcommittee is a unit of the House Administration Committee.)

When the request for $20,000 more to continue the local crime probe came before the Accounts Subcommittee, some members of the group indicated they wanted to know more about Fischbach's past associates and clients

Stumbling Block

This has been the stumbling block that has held up approval of the extra investigating funds more than two months.

High point of the intercommittee controversy came last Wednesday when, at Smith's request, Wayne Hays (D., Ohio) of the Accounts subcommittee was called into a secret meeting before all of the five-man crime subcommittee and Fischbach.

Hays confronted Fischbach with a series of questions which led to sharp words between the two, it was learned.

Onlooking crime subcommittee members apparently failed to be too greatly impressed with the need for hiring new counsel to carry on the investigation.

No Action Recommended

The crime subcommittee thus far has not recommended any action against Fischbach, it was disclosed by authoritative sources last night.

Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.) has declined comment

According to three Accounts subcommittee members, Fischbach was the "focal" point of a three-hour closed meeting of the group Monday when it was unanimously voted to grant the $20,000.

But in agreeing to the extra funds, the three informants reported the Accounts group directed their chairman, Thomas D. Stanley (D., Va.), to write a letter to the House District crime subcommittee about Fischbach. Reason for the letter was to "clear" the Accounts subcommittee of any responsibility for conduct of the crime probe, the three members said.

Stanley has denied that any such action was taken.

Meeting Today

The full House Administration Committee meets at 11 a. m. today to consider the fund as approved by its accounts subcommittee.

Hays told reporters yesterday that sending the letter apparently was contingent upon full committee approval of the extra money.

"If the full group votes the money," he said "I shall demand that the letter is sent to the crime committee."

Reached in New York last night, Fischbach said:

"My job is to please the crime subcommittee. Members have told me I am doing the job to their complete satisfaction. I have heard nothing from them to indicate the slightest dissatisfaction."

Man Who Died in Leap From Bridge Identified

A man who died Sunday in a leap from Taft Bridge was identified yesterday as Roy Padgett, 50, of 404 Sixth st. nw., formerly an engineer employed by the Board of Education.

Identification was made by Padgetts landlady, Mrs. Roxie Poole, of the Sixth st. address, who told police Padgett had been missing since Saturday. It was reported the man had resigned his job at McKinley Tech May 26, and was out of work.

Weather or No

This'll Chill You—Heat Spell on Way

Let us face it: it's going to be hot.

The Weather Bureau has consulted the things it usually consults and come up with the prediction that from now until the middle of August there will be "warmer than normal temperatures over most of the country."

Only place where it will be cooler than normal is in the northern Rocky Mountain States. Furthermore, after a while it isn't going to rain as much as it has been raining. The local weatherman said this was good, because it would mean the local air wouldn't be so humid.

That, however, is the long-range view. Speaking strictly of the immediate future, it is going to be warm and humid today, with scattered showers possible tonight. It probably will go up to 85. Yesterday it went up to 88, at 4:40 p. m.

The Weather Bureau says that from now until Saturday temperatures will be near or slightly above normal—which is 87—for the period.

We may have rain Thursday, and we probably will have it again this weekend, the Weather Bureau opines.

Truman Signs Record D. C. Budget Bill

President Truman yesterday signed into law the District's record $118,049,256 budget for the current fiscal year.

Since July 1, the city government has operated under a continuing congressional resolution permitting the District to draw advance funds from the Treasury.

The municipal budget for last year was $110,269,954, also a record figure.

Still undecided is how much the Federal Government will pay toward city expenses. The House has voted $10,800,000, though the annual Federal payment is set by statute at 12 million dollars. The Senate has tentatively voted to grant the full amount.

The new budget will permit starting in the next few months two major improvements — a bridge across the Anacostia River at East Capitol st., and a 10-year expansion program for the District's overtaxed water supply system.

The fiscal 1951 appropriations bill also calls for putting about five million dollars into permanent improvements in the public school, hospital, playground, welfare and other facilities.

Two Suspended Policemen to Go On Trial Friday

Two Eighth Precinct policemen will face trial board action Friday in connection with the removal of two air-conditioning units from an apartment construction job in the 4900 block of Massachusetts ave. nw.

They are Pvts. Warren G. Farran and Henry J. Martin, who were suspended June 6.

Farran was convicted recently in a District Court trial after being caught by an inspector with the two air-conditioning units in the back of his car. He is free on bail pending appeal. Martin, who at the time, was in a scout car, was acquitted in the same action.

Before the trial board, the policemen will face charges of conduct prejudical to the good order of the department; making an untruthful statement to a superior officer and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Some Enchanted Evening! Who Can Explain It? Who Can . . .

She doesn't know exactly how it happened, but all of a sudden, early yesterday, Mrs. Lucile Carlson, 38, found herself in at the Yacht Basin.

When police fished her out, she told them she had met her estranged husband, Charles Carlson, Monday night, had a few drinks with him and walked to the waterfront.

In the midst of an argument, he pushed her in the water and walked away, she first told police. Later, at the women's bureau, Mrs. Carlson wasn't sure what precipitated the plunge but she maintained stoutly she hadn't jumped.

Mrs. Carlson, who told police she had been staying with a friend at 511 10th st. ne., said she did not want to press charges against her husband.

Sesqui Bowl Declared Best of Its Kind

"This is the most spectacular and the best equipped outdoor theater in America—and that means in the world."

So spoke Author Paul Green yesterday, standing atop the gleaming new Rock Creek Park amphitheater.

Occasion was an official inspection tour of the outdoor theater by such figures as Green; Irving Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks; Paul Massmann, Sesquicentennial general manager; Edward Boykin, director of Sesqui historical activities, and William Haussmann, architect of the theater.

Green's drama "Faith of Our Fathers," is due to open August 5 in the theater as part of the Sesquicentennial celebration. Rehearsals are slated to move Thursday to the theater from George Washington University.

The $563,000 theater—original cost estimate was $300,000—was a shining sight yesterday in the woods near 16th st. and Colorado ave. nw.

It seats 4059 persons—it was supposed to seat only 4056 but three extra seats turned up. A shelter will protect about 2800 of these, Boykin estimated, in case rain comes. Incidentally the back seats are nearest to the shelter.

Walking through the labyrinth of dressing rooms ,examining with happy face such features as an inter-com system by which the stage manager can speak to any of the dressing rooms, Green remarked to Architect Haussmann:

Haussimann said of his work "I'm quite proud of it, naturally."

Byrd Reveals Maryland U. Building Plan

By The Associated Press

The University of Maryland yesterday announced how it is going to pay for new student union buildings, fraternities and sororities, and an auditorium costing five million dollars.

The plans were announced by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president. He said they were agreed to by the Board of Regents and the building authority.

The two groups are one and the same in membership. The State Legislature earlier this year designated the regents as the building authority and gave them power to issue bonds for improvements.

Dr. Byrd said the university has $1,500,000 in cash ready for new building. The remaining $3,500,000 is to be raised in bonds

But he added "it is hoped that the bond issue will be completely retired in 15 years."

The auditorium to cost $2,250,000 will house the entire physical education department and be used for indoor athletic events. It will include a swimming pool. Its seating capacity will be 17,000.

Fraternity and sorority houses costing $700,000 will accommodate an average 40 students. Dormitories costing $1,100,000 will house 500.

A student union building at College Park will cost $600,000 and one at Baltimore $350,000.

Montgomery Adopts Dog, Cat Ordinance

A comprehensive ordinance covering the licensing, handling and disposition of dogs was adopted yesterday by the Montgomery County Council at its meeting in Rockville, Md. The ordinance also applies to cats, without the licensing features.

The 16-page ordinance provides for licensing of dogs more than four monhs of age, with fees of $1 for males and spayed females and $2 for unspayed females and a $10 charge for kennel permits up to 25 dogs, with a higher fee of $20 for those caring for more than 25 dogs.

Unlicensed dogs and stray cats found running at large may be impounded at the county animal shelter for five days. If not claimed, they may be offered for adoption or destroyed.

The ordinance prohibits poisoning or mistreating dogs or cats as well as abandoning them. Persons whose cars run over dogs or cats must stop and give assistance and make every reasonable attempt to locate the owner.

Provision is made for payment to livestock and poultry owners whose property is damaged by dogs and for destroying dogs that attack such animals.

Violations are of the ordinance punishable by fines of from $5 to $100 or 30 days in jail.

The council approved a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for Public Works Department employes, except street cleaners, who will receive 5 cents an hour more. Approximately 190 employes will receive the increases which will total about $42,000 annually.

Dr. William Ditzler of Takoma Park was appointed to the County Advisory Health Committee to succeed Mrs. William W. Hinckley, resigned.

A native of Tiffin, Ohio, Admiral Bennehoff was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy in 1914 and was commissioned an ensign in 1917 upon graduation.

Members of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington, who sponsored the meeting at the Evans Coffee Shop, also invited two other Democratic candidates, Arthur Souther and Lieut. Comdr. H. Keany Kopp, who failed to appear.

THE TIES that bind Luchows in New York and Olmsted's here (Brahms and Mitchell of Olmsted's recently bought the historic New York restaurant) are benefiting Washington diners more and more.

Olmsted patrons were excited about the debut of Sauerbraten on the daily menu. It's a heavy German dish of meat and starch—greatly loved by the Teuton, but strange to the menu of the French chef at Olmsted's. Wurzburger beer, which Luchow's introduced into this country in the last century, really hit the spot when introduced recently by Mr. Brahms here.

In New York, Mr. Mitchell, the partner who is staying there with the new acquisition, reports that Luchow patrons are pleased with the dishes borrowed from Olmsted's. Louisiana Style Shortribs and the Clam Chowder which Olmsted's made famous are the favorites.

MINT JULEP connoisseurs are giving their indorsements to the special juleps at Water Gate Inn. These potent concoctions are not merely frosted. They are served in cups coated with half an inch of solid ice that keeps them temptingly chilly to the last drop.

They can be sipped on the veranda overlooking the Potomac till midnight these summer nights.

WORD from the Neptune Room is that Jean Rainey at the piano and the youthful trio are being held over for the rest of the summer.

Followers should make it a point to go in there some night late, perhaps after a movie. The trio forgets decorum at that hour and really amuses itself. The antics, on an accordion organ and guitar are light and diverting.

THE Hotel Annapolis Anchor Room, complete with portholes and—you guessed it—anchors on the walls, has a talented couple entertaining. Doree plays the piano and has a good singing voice. Bill is a good looking fellow with a lusty baritone. Actually, he trained for the Broadway stage. But like so many others, he finds the satisfaction and certainly the sustenance more ample in the cocktail lounge circuit. Together they have worked up some interesting material.

MISS SIGRID ARNE (center) leaned forward to say "hello" to Mrs. Emil Hurja (left) and Mrs. Irene Caldwell before the mule-drawn barge in which they were riding pulled away from the dock at the American Newspaper Women's Club outing yesterday. The ladies of the press went to Brookmont, Md. and back to Georgetown between 6 and 9:30 p. m.

Not Exactly Cleo's Barge, but—

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE LADIES of the press went on a mule-drawn barge ride last night.

They were the members of the American Newspaper Women's Club bent on an evening of informal entertainment, informal singing, informal chatter—in fact the whole evening was informal.

An old-fashioned bouquet of onions was offered the winner of a balloon-blowing contest. A similar bouquet of radishes went to the one who carried a peanut on a knife across the barge. A talent contest (entered with zest by every queen) brought a fake contract with television.

Prominent among the guests was Mrs. Hobart Brooks, better known as Kate Scott, who was the first president of the American Newspaper Women's Club. Her 88 years did not interfere a bit with full participation in events. Miss Katherine Brooks and Mrs. Margaret Hart Canby, founders of the club, and Miss Sigrid Arne, present president, were also on board.

Thoughtful members of the club brought along sugar and hay to feed the friendly mules who drew the barge up the canal.

The barge pulled away from 30th and M, Georgetown, at 6 o'clock, and returned with tired but happy queens at 9:30 o'clock. Brookmont, Md., was its most distant port.

First Love Brings Mrs. Dougherty Home

ONLY love could have brought Mrs. John Allan Dougherty back to Washington's heat from her summer home near Boston.

Love—it's a first love, too—is the Thrift Shop which Mrs. Dougherty helped organize years ago. One of a number of successful charitable ventures in which this lady has interested herself since.

The Thrift Shop, which distributes its proceeds from the sale of used articles to Washington children's charities, will close its doors the last day of the month for a six-week holiday. Peggy Dougherty is always on hand to help and to see that what's left in the shop is dispatched to the Salvation Army.

The farm, which she bought two years ago, is flourishing, Mrs. Dougherty reports. Help is scarce but with a healthy nephew, John McGraw and his two college-age daughters there for the summer, they all pitch in when the occasion arises. Newest additions to the menage are the score of sheep which will be grazing on the hillsides by the time Peggy Dougherty returns.

English Musicians Feted at Embassy

CLARENCE REYBOULD, famous English conductor, and Leon Goossens, English oboist of world fame, were honored yesterday at a luncheon given by the British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Shewell Franks, at the embassy. Mr. Reybould will conduct this evening at the Watergate, and Mr. Goossens will be guest artist.

The luncheon yesterday included Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Lady Franks, who is in England now, is expected back the end of the month, when she will go to Nantucket Island for the remainder of the summer.

Two Jangos Honored by Group

MRS. SHERMAN K. FRICK and Mrs. Jacques J. Michael Kelly were honor guests at the monthly luncheon given by the Jangos yesterday at the Dupont Plaza Hotel. Mrs. Kelly, the former Ann Gillespie, joined Doctors Hospital Guild when it was organized in 1943 and worked, trained and directed most of the members every day since that time until her marriage in April. She also trained and directed guild members for the Christmas carol sing at Walter Reed and Doctors Hospitals.

Mrs. Frick is resigning her position as vice president of Jangos and moving to Alameda, Calif., where her husband, a Coast Guard officer, has been transferred. She was elected assistant treasurer in 1948 and treasurer in 1949 and as first vice president she has been advisor to the Junior Jangos since April.

Cuban Ambassador Sponsors Exhibition

THE Cuban Ambassador, Luis Machado, is sponsor for the exhibitions of paintings by a compatriot, Senorita Mirta Cerra, which opens with a preview on Monday afternoon at the United Nations Club.

The artist, who is already here, is giving her first Washington show. Painting of the country she loves and knows best Senorita Cerra's portraits and landscapes are typically Cuban. She's been painting "ever since she was a little girl" she says. She studied first in Havana and went on to New York to attend the Art Students League and to learn etching.

Agnes Eve, Dr. Morrison Are Married

THE marriage of Agnes Kirkland Eve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kirkland of Tampa, Fla., and Dr. Ralph L. Morrison, of Washington, took place yesterday in the First Presbyterian Church, Tampa. Dr. George M. Docherty, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church in Washington, officiated.

Following a reception Dr. and Mrs. Morrison left for New Orleans and from there will travel by air on a six-week tour of the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Coast. They will be at home in Seat Pleasant, Md. after Labor Day.

The bride, who has resided in Washington for about 15 years, is an artist and aviatrix. She is a member of the national organization of women flyers known as the Ninety-Nines.

Dr. Morrison, a native Washingtonian, is a past president of the District of Columbia Dental Society and was the first secretary and later president of the American Academy of Restorative Dentistry.

MRS. EDWARD TREGLOWN (right) and Norma Lanum try one of Ida Jean Kain's exercises in hopes of whittling an inch or two off their waistlines. They are learning a variety of calisthenics to supplement the 21-day Kain "Miracle Diet"

Your Figure, Madame

Beware the Lure of Cold Foods; Often They're the Most Fattening

By Ida Jean Kain

IN the good old summertime, it is deceptively easy to add fuel calories and fat padding, almost without realizing what goes on. That's because summer fare and cold foods somehow seem lighter, and less fattening. For one thing, cold foods do not give an immediate sensation of heat, and it is more difficult to think of them as high in fuel even though they may be high in calories.

Take iced coffee, for example, which is frequently drunk in large quantities during a hot spell. It seems s-o-o cooling. But iced coffee calls for more cream and sugar than the hot beverage—therefore it contains more fuel and is more "heating" and fattening.

Potato Chips Are Fattening

AS you take seconds on potato salad, another favorite summer dish, again it's easy to regard this as light eating. But half a cup of potato salad contains 200 calories, so with seconds it's easy to stoke up on 400 fuel calories. That's four times as many calories as contained in a medium size baked potato. Or, it may be even harder to realize there are as many heat units in eight to 10 potato chips as in one baked potato.

Then too, cold foods do not bring that comforting feeling of satisfaction so quickly as a meal which contains something hot. One hot food with a meal helps you to feel that you have dined well.

Seasonal Foods Low in Calories

BUT let's turn to the foods that can be included in summer slimming menus. All the seasonal foods are delicious and low in calories, and that even includes corn-on-the-cob. One ear six inches long has only 50 calories. So take a nine-inch ear for 75 calories. Butter? Of course, but have only a half pat on your plate. Treat yourself to all summer vegetables, salads and fresh fruits—they're all refreshingly low in calories. Bolster the menu with cheese, hard-cooked eggs, lean meat or sea food, and have a pint of buttermilk or skim milk each day.

The secret of planning a slimming diet at any season is to keep the calories sufficiently low to force the body to use part of its fat reserve, but at the same time to cover the body's basic nutrition needs. These summer menus will let you keep your bounce, but lose weight.

Sure-Fire Technique

Diet Squad Woos Shape by Exercise

By Norma Lanum

DIETS are here to stay, all right. In fact, a rigid diet has come to be one of the most stylish pastimes for the girls these days.

But you can't trust calorie-slashing alone to solve your figure problem. That's the advice of Ida Jean Kain whose 12-day "Miracle Diet" appears on these pages.

How do you know you're going to lose the weight in the right places? The answer is, you don't—unless, of course you take the proper exercises along with your skimmed milk and broiled tomatoes.

Mrs. Edward Treglown and I, who now rank among the most enthusiastic of Miss Kain's followers, are in the second day of the two-week diet.

Shapely Figure The Real Goal

WHEREAS each of us is anxious to lose 5 or 10 pounds, we're even more interetsed in coming out of this experience with well-proportioned—shapely, that is—figures.

And this demands just about every kind of strenuous exercise our versatile Miss Kain has on the books. Between the two of us Ruth Treglown and I possess almost every known figure defect.

In the first place, my hips, I'm told, have reached alarming proportions. At least one or two inches must be whittled from the 39-inch circumference, says Miss Kain—as if there would be nothing simpler.

And it will be simple, she maintains, if I can stick to these two sure-fire exercises:

First Exercise Starts on Side

FOR the first one I lie down on my left side, my right arm stretched out on the floor shoulder-length and my left arm tucked underneath my head. With swift muscle pulling motions, I pull up my right knee almost to my chest and then swing it out behind me. I hold that position for a few seconds and then start again. After five or six of these swings I switch over to the right side and swing with the left leg.

The second hip exercise is easier still. I just lie on my back and roll from side to side.

Ruth is taking these hip slimmers, too, but Miss Kain has suggested she devote most of her energy to midriff exercises. "And it does take energy!" Mrs. Treglown declares vehemently.

Pull on Muscles Does the Trick

TO START with, Ruth lies on her back on the floor with her knees bent, soles of her feet flat on the floor. Her arms are out at her sides on the floor at shoulder level, elbows bent, with the forearms back on the floor forming an L-shape.

Then Ruth pulls her stomach muscles up and in and lifts her hips just slightly off the floor holding the "up-and-in pull." Then she lowers her hips to the floor, pulls in again and once more raises her hips She does it six times in succession and will increase the number gradually each day.

A good variation of this exercise is to tilt her hips from right to left after they are raised slightly. And she remembers to hold her stomach muscles up and in while doing the tilting.

Popular Sit-Up Good for Midriff

OF COURSE, the most effective of the midriff exercises is the popular sit-up. Miss Kain advises her followers to try the other exercises for a few days before undertaking the sit-ups but Ruth plunged into the sit-ups her first day . . . with the enthusiasm of a sandlot baseball player.

For the sit-ups she lies flat on her back, her arms back on the floor overhead, her legs straight down. She gets a firm grip on her middle muscles and then, without lifting her feet, she swings her arms forward pulling herself up to the sitting position. She follows through by bending over and touching her toes. She makes it in one continuous motion and then goes down again, keeping those legs straight.

By this time our enthusiastic Mrs. Treglown has a few aches and pains, but she's still eager.

If Denise Can Do It, So Can You

IN her program to give us glamorized figures, Miss Kain also suggests an exercise to give me more curves—where they are needed, she adds pointedly.

It calls for stretching both arms in front of me at shoulder length keeping the arms tense right down to the finger tips. Then I crisscross the arms, so they're barely overlapping, in rapid succession.

Miss Kain and I were praeticising this movement for a few minutes when she gaily announced: "Denise Darcel increased her bust measurement from 38 to 39 inches just this way!" With that statement, I was through for the day!

'Real' Italian Sauce for Spaghetti Blends Chopped Beef and Pork With Olive Oil, Tomato and Spices

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a recipe for making a real Italian meat sauce for spaghetti? A. L. T., Arlington, Va.

Here is one from the new Talisman Italian Cookbook, by Ada Boni (Crown Publishers.) Madame Boni is editor of Italy's leading women's magazine, Preziosa, and famed in her own country for her cookbook, Il Talismano. Recipes in this book, now in its sixteenth Italian edition, have been adapted to American methods and measurements in her American cookbook.

MEAT SAUCE FOR SPAGHETTI

½ pound each beef and pork, chopped together
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 clove garlic
½ medium onion, chopped
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 medium can tomatoes
2 small cans tomato puree
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon chopped basil
2 bay leaves
1 tablespoon butter

Place chopped meat, garlic, oil, and parsley in saucepan and brown slowly. Stir frequently to prevent meat from cooking in lumps. Remove garlic as soon as browned. Add tomatoes, tomato puree, salt and pepper. Cover pan and simmer 1 hour. Add basil and bay leaves and cook 1 minute longer. Remove from fire and add butter. Makes enough sauce for 1 pound spaghetti or other forms of macaroni.

DEAR ANNE:
There are no ghosts in our house but the stairs still creak! Do you know of any way we could correct the trouble ourselves? There are only about two steps that make a habit of squeaking when treaded upon. G. W. G., Alexandria, Va.

Each step in a stairway is made of two boards, as you well know—the "riser," which stands upright, and the "tread" or horizontal board on which you step. These boards are supported by planks cut out to receive them. If the stairway runs along a wall, one of the planks is fastened to the wall, into which the steps are fitted for additional security and fastened with small wedges.

Even with good construction, the wedges are loosened by age and wear, allowing the ends of tread and riser to move when someone walks on the stairs. A simple method of stopping these creaks is to have a person stand on the defective tread, so that it will be held against the riser, and fasten the tread to the riser with 2-inch finishing nails driven at angles to form a V. The nailheads should then be sunk with a nailset and the holes filled with putty, tinted if necessary to match the finish of the stair.

DEAR ANNE:
I have an egg-shell color damask tablecloth about 4½ feet square which I would like to dye a more interesting color—perhaps a lime green.

Since the tablecloth is subject to repeated washing, I am wondering whether an ordinary home dye, kept below the boiling point, as the instructions suggest, would be satisfactory. Some articles which I have dyed at home fade unevenly when washed or even when exposed to sunlight. Although the instructions do not call for boiling, I am wondering whether boiling would produce a more lasting color. Or should such a job be done professionally?

E. B., Washington.

A professional dyeing may prove more lasting than the home variety, but you should be able to achieve satisfactory results with this tablecloth. This is especially true since you do not plan to dye it a dark color.

I'd follow the dye manufacturer's instructions exactly. These have been carefully worked out in their laboratories as the best way to use the dyes. Remember that a thorough rinsing out of surplus dye at the end is important. Later, when you wash the cloth, don't use strong soaps and always hang it in the shade.

Spurs Alumni

Miss Warren Travels Far For Florida

FOUR THOUSAND miles may be a long way to travel just to sing the praises of your alma mater, but not if it's Florida State University.

At least, that's the opinion of Miss Alma Warren, president of the FSU Alumni Association and the sister of Governor Fuller Warren.

Miss Warren, accompanied by Miss Mildred Parrish, the executive secretary of the alumni group, started out from Tallahassee. Taking turns in the driver's seat, they drove to Boston, where they attended the American Alumni Council meeting, and organized alumni clubs in New York and New Jersey on the way. They attended the Washington alumni meeting last night at the Church of the Pilgrims, and today they will start on their way back, stopping in Atlanta, Ga., to organize an alumni club there. The Washington club, one of the oldest alumni organizations of the university, has been active for about 12 years.

Equipped with unbreakable records of the musical organizations of FSU and a film depicting college life, Miss Warren and Miss Parrish have been bringing the alumni of the Eastern Seaboard up-to-date on their school.

One of the recent developments of the school is the switch from a girl's school to a coeducational university about three years ago. In that time the enrollment has jumped from 2500 to the present 6000 students.

Miss Warren attributes this increase to a couple of reasons. Not only did the servicemen want to return to Florida for their schooling, but the university offers some courses not taught everywhere.

"JOHNNY APPLESEED," the American folklore hero who planted apple orchards throughout the Middle West, was the inspiration of this new gown. The dress was featured at the fashion show-luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel given by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Association

Style Show Tops Party By Auxiliary

LADIES of the American Association of Nurserymen had their big party yesterday. The Ladies Auxiliary of the Association, which is convening in Washington this week, gathered at the Shoreham Hotel for a gala fashion show and luncheon.

Highlights of the show was the presentation of a costume inspired by Johnny Appleseed, honorary chairman of the convention and planter of all those appleseeds in American folklore.

Fall fashions from Jelleff's were shown during the luncheon.

Later in the afternoon John D. Siebenthaler of Dayton, Ohio, was elected president of the Nurserymen's Association of Secretaries, a subsidiary organization of the AAN. Barney Ward of Lansing, Mich., was elected vice president and Paul Hoffman of Towson, Md., secretary

Robert Baker of Houston, Tex., and Peter J. Cascio of Hartford, Conn., were elected to the executive committee of AAN.

Sudie-Belle Rodier To Be Married

Miss Rodier is a graduate of Holy Cross Academy in Washington and of the Emergency Hospital Nursing School. During the war she served as a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the Air Force. Mr. Busboom, a graduate of George Washington University, is with ECA. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Jobé Says...

Briefing for Fall

Will you come to school with me for the next two weeks, for a short course in the basic background of our fall 1950 fashions? I think it's important to understand as much as possible about them so that you can be sure you are spending your money wisely.

First, however, I want to say again there is one word we must never forget—quality. For although we pick our clothes by style first, we should make sure of the quality before we buy. Don't confuse quality with high price either; there are standard qualities in every price field. Just be sure that whatever you buy is the best quality offered at the price you can afford to pay.

A Winchester Rifle Is Keith's 'Hero'

By Richard L. Coe

"WINCHESTER 73," at Keith's, is something different in the way of Westerns and it seems to me a good one.

The title role is one of the few "One of One Thousand" Model 73 Winchesters, the most valued rifle of the 1870's. It's honestly won at a Dodge City Fourth of July shooting tournament in '73, but before Winner James Stewart has had it five minutes, runner-up Stephen McNally has slugged Jimmy and skipped out of town with the rifle.

Steve loses it in a hot poker game to an Indian trader, who, in turn, leaves it and his scalp with Young Bull, the Indian chief. Young Bull and his tribe attack a U. S. Cavalry troop and a dance hall girl who, with her fiance, has joined the soldiers' bivouac. Stewart and his pal Millard Mitchell have joined the party but though they lick the Indians, they leave before knowing the chief had the rifle. The fiance gets the rifle and he loses it—and his life—to the Waco Kid, played by our old friend Dan Duryea. Eventually, the cycle is completed, with a rocky gunfight between Stewart and McNally, a Cain and Abel duel, by the way.

Because the playing is forthright and the lines to the point, the yarn moves along at an entertaining clip. By making the rifle the center of the plot, many of the Western cliches are avoided and though there is a bank robbery, it's a side issue plotted by the Waco Kid.

The way I get it, only 124 of the "One and One Thousand" variety were made, though from 1873 to 1924, the Winchester people turned out 720,610 of the Model 73. The top of the barrel, just ahead of the receiver, gives you the clew to the rare ones: "One of One Thousand" is engraved there in script. It's the script writers' logical notion that of the few remaining such rarities, each one must have a fascinating story.

The comparatively brief one they've imagined for this manages to include mose of the aspects people like to find in their Western movies and to the credit of Robert L. Richards and Borden Chase, who wrote the yarn, they've done better than usual with the True Love angle. With the refreshingly life-like Shelley Winters to play the role, they've got a solid leading lady.

Wonderful Hasty Duryea

If you've any doubts about the affection with which the villainous Dan Duryea is held by his followers, you should have been at yesterday's first house. His appearance is delayed, but when he whammed in through the door to give the eye to Miss Winters, you'd have thought the Marines had taken Korea. With such socko performances as this, I'm afraid Mr. Duryea will have to be a villain the rest of his professional life.

Stewart and the others, especially the serviceable Millard Mitchell, are on the ball with their characters—heavy black, pure white.

Yes, the Western fans will go for this one and even those who fear the Open Spaces offer them little novelty, will find the Richards-Chase screen play to their liking.

"WINCHESTER 73." Universal-International release produced by Aaron Rosenberg. Photographed by William Daniels. Screen play by Robert L. Richards and Borden Chase. Directed by Anthony Mann. At Keith's.

CATHOLIC U's "The College Widow" (which closes tomorrow night) prompted this corner to wish it were a musical comedy; Gretchen Hood phones in to say that, as she recalls it, the George Ade comedy was the basis for one of Jerome Kern's first hits, "Leave It to Jane."

"ESCAPE INTO DREAMS," the charming and very Italian film at the Dupont, will hold on a few days longer before "D. O. A." takes over . . . John Atkinson writes in to point out that my impression that Michael Tor, the American captain of "Escape Into Dreams," is an Italian, was wrong . . . Atkinson knew Tor as an American with the Allied Commisson in Rome an dsagely remarks: "He's also not an Italian in the adroit way in which he handles that pipe."

KEITH'S has concluded its "write-your-own-review" contest for "The White Tower" and it appears there are reams of entries for the Bedford Springs first prize . . . I've not seen the mall, though I know how Milton K. Johnston felt about "100 words or less," but must assure him the limitation was not the reviewers' . . . But it is the reason, Mr. J., for the old newspaper crack: "I haven't time to write a short piece." . . . The shorter they are, the harder they come.

IN BRIEF: Disney's live-actor version of "Treasure Island" opens August 2 at Keith's . . . The Apex is proud of its double bill for Thursday and Friday: "Adam's Rib," with Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Judy Holiday and Tom Ewell, and "Julia Misbehaves," with Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon . . . The Masquers of Roosevelt Center plot their third "Court Program" for tomorrow night, the play being Ronald E. Mitchell's "A Rogue in Bed."

TOMORROW'S ARRIVALS: Corinne Calvet and Diana Lynn are these decorative friends of Dean Martin. They'll be at the Palace tomorrow with Marie Wilson and Jerry Lewis in "My Friend Irma Goes West"

Police to Enforce Water Restrictions In Prince Georges

Prince Georges County police yesterday were directed by the County Commissioners to enforce restrictions on use of water during the summer months.

Major Ralph W. Brown, police head, was told to instruct policemen to issue warnings to violators before making arrests. The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission has clamped down on nonessential use of water during the summer.

Also at yesterday's meeting in Marlboro the commissioners voted to give a high priority in the 1951-52 road program to the improvement of Suitland rd. from Silver Hill rd. to Allentown rd. The road provides access to Andrews Air Force Base and receives heavy use by military personnel, it was pointed out.

4 Million Bibles Supplied GIs In Japan, Adventists Told

San Francisco, July 18 (Spl.).—The Rev. Ralph W. Bayless of San Francisco, representative of the American Bible Society, told the World Seventh Day Adventist convention today that the society's big project is supplying bibles to Japan at the request of General MacArthur.

Bayless said that since the war more than 4 million Bibles have been sent to Japan and the goal is 10 million.

Bayless was presented a supplemental contribution of $2000 for the society by W. E. Nelson, retiring treasurer of the Adventists, who make annual donations.

Dr. George T. Harding of Los Angeles, a nephew of the late President Warren G. Harding, spoke on "The Emotional Needs of Children."

"To be good parents, you ought to be happy parents," he said. "Not too dominating, nor too inclined to spoil. A good parent does not have to spank a child often. When he does spank, it must be for a sound reason—say, if the child wants to run into the street. A child spanked without a reason becomes defiant, resentful, hostile. He refuses to accept future advice."

Dr. Harding frowns on both television and IQ tests for children. He said television keys children up so that they are unable to enjoy less exciting forms of recreation.

"Television is all right for adults—except for some immature adults—as the effect on them is transitory. But it gives a cild an excessive interest in excitement," he said.

IQ tests are equally bad, he said. "The parents get to think their child is a genius and ruin his chance for a normal, happy life," he explained.

New Car Sales Here in June Spurt to 3477

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington new car sales in June set a sizzling pace and reached the second best monthly total on record here.

Last month's registrations of new passenger cars and trucks totaled 3477, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association. This was exceeded only by the 4465 in July, 1949, when there was a rush to beat the new District of Columbia sales tax.

For the first six months this year, local new car sales rose to a record 16,526. This was a gain of 806 over the same 1949 period.

Helping to boost the June total was the resumption of output by Chrysler divisions after a long strike. Chrysler, De Soto, Dodge and Plymouth dealers finally were able to start deliveries and cut down piled up orders.

Comparative monthly figures for local new car registrations for the past three years follow:

	1950	1949	1948
February	2207	1829	1943
March	2844	2497	3200
April	3320	3010	2755
May	3544	2828	2339
June	3477	3288	1585

Meanwhile, a check of local auto dealers shows that the wait period for new car deliveries is lengthening. One Ford dealer says that currently he is promising deliveries in about four weeks, as contrasted with "a few days" just a month ago.

A Chevrolet dealer quotes 90 days, whereas a month ago he was saying two to three weeks. A Plymouth dealer is stamping on all orders "Impossible to give estimated delivery date."

The dealers claim that nearly the same situation exists now that they struggled with in the early postwar days.

GROWTH: Deposits of Citizens Bank of Riverdale, Md., are at a new peak of $9,900,000, President Alfred H. Smith reported yesterday. This is an increase of 1½ million in the past six months. Assets have doubled in the past three years, Smith added, and earnings also are at a new peak.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Mrs. Catharine H. Atkinson has been named manager of the brokerage department of J. D. Marsh & Associeties . . . Sanford B. Trans World Airline has taken delivery of the first of 42 twin-engined Martin aircraft The others will follow at intervals of two weeks.

CUM LAUDE: Publicizing its new Constellations, Capital Airlines has sent out bottles of honey with the remark, "It's a Honey!" followed by small cakes with the statement, "It Takes the Cake!" (Suggestion: Why not a picture of Capital Airline's own Jane Beam with the new airliner and the remark, "It's a Beauty!")

PREVIEWS: Washington dealers today will continue to preview the new 1951 line of Zenith television and radio sets at the Shoreham Hotel. Ray Kepler, sales manager for Edgar Morris Sales Co., local distributor, said the new line features reductions on all models and many new features . . . A three-day local preview of new General Electric television and radio receivers will conclude Thursday. According to J. W. Belt, the G. E. line will not have smaller than a 14-inch picture tube. The showing is at the salon of G. E. Supply Corp., 705 Edgewood ave. ne.

WARNING: The American Bankers Association asked the Nation's banks to guard against loans to consumers and businessmen that might increase "panicky buying" it said is under way in some areas. F. Raymond Peterson, president of the ABA, said: "Bank credit should not be used to stimulate an inflationary tendency nor to finance speculative purchases. Present-day events make it necessary for every bank to reexamine its policies in this regard."

Without Painful Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Mrs. Barbour Quits Trailer; Pets Remain

Montgomery County police reported yesterday that "apparently" Mrs. Marion Barbour is complying with the order of Judge Stedman Prescott, that she cease sleeping in her trailer in violation of the Montgomery County zoning ordinance.

The injunction was issued July 11 in county circuit court upon the request of Assistant County Attorney James S. Lanigan.

Police reported to Lanigan yesterday that their investigation revealed she apparently was not sleeping in the trailer but that her six dogs and several cats still remained and that she visited them daily to feed them.

The injunction ordered her to leave by last Saturday. On Monday morning the woman was observed by inspectors of the Department of Inspection and Licenses removing clothing from the trailer.

The injunction did not order her to remove the dogs or cats. The alleged violation is occupying a trailer for sleeping and dwelling purposes in a residential "A" zone in which only one-family detached residences are permitted.

Mrs. Barbour previously had been fined $300 for ocupying the trailer, which is located on property owned by Dr. Ernest Q. King of Takoma Park, Md., at Patton dr. and Miles rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Last Brick Is Put Into Place At New Washington Post Bldg.

The Washington Post

The new home of The Washington Post, 1513-21 L st. nw., had a "topping out party" yesterday afternoon on its rooftop.

A tradition in the building industry, the affair consisted of the laying into position of the last brick of the exterior and the erection of a flag nearby.

In the old days, according to the frequently voiced recollections of the bricklayers, the occasion called for the tapping of a keg of beer and the passing of several rounds, but yesterday's was a dry one.

Participating were H. James Fogle, 137 C st. ne., superintendent of masonry; Larry D. Smith, 1016 North Carolina ave. se., masonry foreman, and William E. Harris, 2150 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Harris is a gold-card member, which indicates he has completed 50 years as a member of the Bricklayers and Plasterers Union, AFL. He said he was 67, but Fogle declared, with a gesture of disbelief, "He's past 70, if he's a day."

Harris has laid the first and last brick of many Washington area structures. His hands put the opening and finishing touches on the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Keith's Theater, Botanical Garden, and the Agriculture Department and Internal Revenue buildings here.

No Double Meanings, Godfrey

By Jack O'Brian
(Eleventh of a Series)

Recently a small group of important radio people got together to talk about the subject of Arthur Godfrey.

This was not to be an amiable, admiring klatch but a circle of gents in the advertising field who thought something had to be done about the "dirt" they insisted filled the radio and television air whenever Arthur Godfrey opened his uninhibited mouth.

Before this meeting, the men and several women who were to take initial but unofficial steps to curb the Godfrey humor gathered documented evidence for their decisions by listening closely to everything Arthur said for a week's broadcasts, making notes and comments about same to have ready at the very important conclave.

The general tone of the meeting was bluenose, the intention to force Godfrey to stick to the scripts supplied by advertising agencies of the products he extolled in his own peculiarly successful fashion.

During the meeting, all hastened immediately to be heard upon the subject of Godfrey in a certain instance several days before. The seven or eight persons present babbled along until the man who was temporarily in charge decided to make some sort of order out of the Godfrey-inspired chaos.

Chose One Incident

He asked each person to write out the most flagrant case of blue language, subject or innuendo, that was heard exuding from Godfrey's lips during the week of trial listening. Each of the men and women present did so.

When the papers were read, it was found that all but one of the persons present had chosen a single incident for appraisal, but with this result:

Four of the seven had placed entirely different meanings upon Godfrey's words.

That would have made him not a past master of double entendre, but a champion of quadruple entendre.

It also would have made this projected panel of penalizers feel very foolish. Especially when confronted with Godfrey's quietly sincere statement that he had only one meaning in mind, the simple, primary, literal meaning of the words he used.

Most Claims Disproved

This was only one instance of Godfrey's strangely unbossed ether antics causing concerted opposition to form on the right.

In virtually every instance the claims of conversational dirt have been disproved.

In one or two cases the television camera picked up an eyebrow raised with the sort of insinuation that leaves everything to the mind of the viewer. If the mind is nicely-laundered morally, nothing gets through the iconoscope to outrage anyone. If the raised eyebrow or infection falls upon untidy minds, nothing much can be done to stop it from gathering dirt.

Such possibilities have been constant since 1933, when Godfrey began ad libbing his way through his programs and stopped reading everything written for him.

Matter of fact, the likable Godfrey inflections, even when tuned strictly to the clean, washed language of the advertising agencies and script writers, were causing minor ructions in Baltimore and Washington all the way back in 1929 when the redhead started booming that warm baritone into radio fans' ears.

"Back in 1929 I was really sick about it," Godfrey says now.

"In those days I'd receive mail about something dirty or insinuating in my words or tone, and I'd go crazy trying to figure out what they meant. Station manages even tried to tell me I was lousing things up for them and myself, but I couldn't see what they meant. Once a local police commissioner wrote about it and suggested I tone it down for my own good. I still was all at sea.

"Later, the letters—there never were more than a few—stopped arriving, except for an occasional letter whose contents were so much alike I thought they were from the same person, even though I know they weren't now. It's just that such a strange, suspicious mentality exists everywhere in the country, everywhere in the world probably.

"Why, from 1929 until 1933 I rarely uttered a word that wasn't written for me and checked by a program director before I ever saw it. Still those letters kept coming in. Not too often, but enough.

Protests Waned

In 1933, when he started ad libbing his programs entirely, the protests grew again. Then they dropped off almost to none at all until Godfrey began piping his local disk jockey programs from Washington, D. C., to WCBS in New York, striking an entirely new audience.

He also struck that same suspicious mentality, almost enough alike to be that same woman who wrote in at Baltimore, and again in Washington.

"Strangely, I began to get the squawks from New York alone, and not from Washington, although I was talking about exactly the same things on an almost identical program. Then the protests quieted down and died it almost entirely.

"Until 1945, when I started the daytime network show for CBS.

"This time I got no letters from Washington or New York, where I was well known and folks were accustomed to my delivery, but from other cities. That same woman must have had a lot of cousins all over."

Managers of CBS stations elsewhere became understandably alarmed and a good deal of time and patience was expended calming them down.

"I assured them if they would wait a month or two the air would clear itself. Sure enough, true to form, the protests again stopped."

But—then came television!

Not only did Godfrey's unretouched words fly into the Nation's ears, but his lifted eyebrows, smiles, his facial punctuation of any line, however innocuous, were lending a double, triple, and—remember that panel?—quadruple meaning in a manner the redhead couldn't seem to anticipate.

Hunt Other Meanings

Godfrey, frankly, is a fellow with an extremely earthy sense of humor.

I've found him also with a deep feeling of responsibility for what escapes from the radio and TV studios, and sincerely careful not to "louse myself up," as he puts it.

But he also has such a set of pliable, almost 100 percent plastic features that he could be emphasizing the simplest point with such a smiling, mobile countenance that viewers go hunting for other meanings. Certainly, Godfrey's pulled a few boners in his day, and like the late Mayor LaGuardia, he admits that when he does he pulls a dandy.

Open Season Ended

But he gets piqued slightly at the few times he's been criticized publicly for things that started innocently and got out of hand. Not seriously, but made to seem so by misconstruing his smiles as leers, and his comments as something else.

When he was taken quietly to task on one or two occasions for handling matters in such a way as might be taken differently, he just as quietly saw the point and made sure it didn't happen again.

"For a while it was open season on Godfrey," he says now, "but that ended finally, too.

"It got so bad for a while that I was afraid to say the word 'Chesterfield' because of that first syllable."

He was sorely tempted at first, he said, to make a big noise about it but decided the best thing was to ignore it.

He also takes a great deal of comfort from the fact that no more than a few letters of protest arrive in the wake of any ether "incident," and that compared with his weekly listenership of 40 million, the percentage of opposition to his style of presentation is just about nonexistent.

Complaint Ratio Small

"I'd hate to think all those 40 million were listening to me because they're dirty minded," Godfrey said last week.

"This country sure would be in an awful shape."

Godfrey naturally does not expect to quiet every last letter of protest. Reaching constantly as he does for folk humor and things of national instead of sectional interest, he strikes an occasional offkey note.

Sometimes the very provincial meaning of a word or phrase or situation gets him into trouble. The classical Chic Sale back-yard convenience gave a whole generation harmless laughter. But when Godfrey brought a hint of it onto television, the complaints must have sent Chic Sales rolling over in his casket. With laughter.

To be concluded tomorrow.

Politics Denied In Bus Fare Case

Annapolis, Md., July 18 (AP).—Maryland's Public Service Commission today denied it was playing politics when it refused to grant a 15-cent fare on Baltimore buses and trolleys.

The commission was merely trying to keep the Baltimore Transit Co. from "committing suicide," PSC lawyers told the Court of Appeals.

Clarence W. Miles, BTC attorney, argued the two-cent fare hike would take the company out of the red and produce a small profit.

He asked the court to reverse Judge Emory Niles of Baltimore, who upheld the Public Service Commission's order denying the 15-cent fare.

Symons Honored At Maryland U. On Retirement

More than 400 persons attended a testimonial for Dr. T. B. Symons, dean of the College of Agriculture and head of the University of Maryland extension service, Monday night in the campus dining hall.

Dr. Symons will retire in September after 48 years' service at the university. He learned last night, among other things, that through a unanimous resolution of the university's board of regents, the new agriculture building will be known as Symons Hall.

Numerous farm leaders, members of the faculty and former students paid tribute to the educator who had reached the compulsory retirement age of 70. He was presented with a mahogany desk and chair. Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland U. president, was toastmaster.

2 Mail Deliveries In Dallas Suburb Ordered by Court

Dallas, Tex., July 18 (U.P.).—The postman must call twice in Oak Cliff, suburb within the city of Dallas, a Federal circuit judge ruled today.

An Oak Cliff insurance man, Judge B. Fite, had complained his business suffered when the single mail delivery was instituted in the Oak Cliff district, while Dallas' main business section got three deliveries.

Attorneys for the Postmaster General were expected to appeal the decision.

Judge Atwell, in making permanent an injunction against Dallas Postmaster J. Howard Payne to prevent the cut in mail delivery to Oak Cliff, said that "the postmaster has discriminated against the business section of Oak Cliff," which is, "in truth and in fact, a city in its own right."

Eye Appeal

Women Really Pull Their Weight in TV

By C. E. Butterfield

NEW YORK (AP).—Women in television, it would seem, are becoming much more of a factor there than they ever were in radio. Eye appeal may have a lot to do with it.

Wendy Barrie

But there are other aspects. Take Wendy Barrie, for instance. Originally in the movies, she meets the eye appeal standard, then goes considerably further. She has established herself as a camera personality in a breezily intimate commentary.

She interviews all sorts of folks. She chats with her viewers, even talking back rather caustically at times. She sweetly wants everyone to be a "good bunny." She turns comedienne on other instances. She crowds a lot of vocal and visual diversity into her 15-minute sessions.

Unlike the radio, where women broadcasters direct themselves primarily to their own sex, all this is intended for everybody.

Wendy isn't the only one developing the new "art," if it can be so described. Similar efforts have brought renewed attention to Faye Emerson, whose qualifications include camera charm as much as anything else, and Eloise McElhone, whose talkative style speaks for itself.

Right now Wendy has three shows a week on NBC, to which she recently moved from ABC-TV. This schedule is expected to continue in the fall season. Meanwhile, she is nurturing an ambition to do serious drama on the Broadway stage.

Faye also keeps quite active. On NBC once a week now, she is scheduled to return to CBS September 26 for her first three-a-week series. Eloise is running once a week on Dumont. These, of course, are in addition to guest appearances in other types of programs.

FEMININE personality singers seem to draw the most emphasis on the radio prospect. Fall return of Ginny Simms is one indication. Another is the renewed stress NBC has been giving to Mindy Carson.

Ginny's new series will be on ABC, as already announced, where she will have 15 minutes on Sunday nights beginning September 17 under the title of Song Shop. She will be assisted by the Buddy Cole Trio on the sponsored program.

One of Ginny's most recent programs was a series of her own on CBS which she concluded a couple seasons ago.

Mindy Carson now is occupying three of the late night song spots on NBC originally developed when the Morton Downey tenor was transferred from MBS. He is now off the air, to return in October on CBS.

Until mid-August, Mindy is singing on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. On August 17 she will shift to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays to present a 12-week series on behalf of ROTC recruiting for the fall college terms.

TO TAKE over after Meet the Press concludes a run of nearly five years on MBS, the network reports it is setting up a new series entitled "Reporters' Roundup." It will be Thursday nights beginning August 10.

With Everett Holles as moderator, MBS said it plans to ask various personalities in the news to appear as guests, as in Meet the Press, but the added feature of including questions from listeners.

Meet the Press, now Friday nights on MBS, will close August 4. A separate television version on NBC-TV Sunday afternoons is being continued with the possibility that the radio version ultimately may transfer to NBC. Martha Roundtree is moderator of the TV series and Lawrence E. Spivak of the radio. They are co-owners of the program.

Bigamy Denied By Twice-Wed Marylander

Gerald B. Wright, accused Monday in Marlboro of being married to two women at the same time, yesterday said it wasn't so.

The 40-year-old Wright was arrested at his home, 210 Maple st., Morningside, on a warrant sworn to by Mrs. Jean Wright, of the same address.

Swearing of the warrant followed a conference between Mrs. Wright, Prince Georges State's Attorney A. Gywnn Bowie and Mrs. Imogene Wright, of 433 Brandywine st. se., who also said she is married to Wright.

Wright, an area circulation manager for The Washington Post, maintained the charge was false. He said he was divorced from Imogene and can produce papers to prove it.

Currently free under $1000 bond, he will have an opportunity to submit this proof at a preliminary hearing set for Friday in Marlboro Police Court.

Wright admitted he married Imogene in Elkton, Md., in 1947, and said the divorce preceded his marriage to Jean in Hyattsville in 1948.

Jo Hailey of Broadcasting Magazine overheard this conversation at a downtown drug store:

Customer: Hey, is this all the ice cream I get for 20 cents?

EXPLANATION

The other day I ran a paragraph about a policeman who had been observed riding a motorcycle while wearing spurs.

I find now that there's a good explanation for this seemingly strange combination. The policeman in question is identified as Pvt. J. J. Conlin of 227 O st. sw.

The motorcycle is his own private property, and he uses it to go to and from work. And the spurs come in mighty handy when Officer Conlin reports for duty — as a mounted man with the Park Police.

Katherine H. Ramsey, 404 N. George Mason dr., Arlington, Va.: If you've written to our circulation director about your complaint, your worries are over. He's a wonderful straightener-outer.

Lester A. Levy, 10003 Sidney rd., Silver Spring, Md.: Our Circulation Department gets hundreds of requests for vacation changes of address, so it's a good idea to notify them of your plans a few days in advance.

C. Elliott Garver, 718 S. Washington st., Alexandria, Va.: Good catch. Thanks for calling it to our attention.

Dear Bill:

Miss Galbraith's gentle rebuke with regard to your shortsighted sightseeing and your chastened reply gave me a warm chuckle.

Esther Galbraith is an excellent teacher of English at Roosevelt High, and such a delightful person that I wish my children might have the privilege and pleasure of studying with her, as I did.

Now do you feel better?

Lois Schieck,
Bethany Beach, Del.

Dear Mrs. Schieck:

Not particularly, because my feelings weren't hurt in the first place. I stepped out of line and got whapped for it—not for the first time, nor, I fear, the last.

One of the few things I've learned about this columning business is that a guy is bound to make some mistakes. And when he does, no alibi will be nearly as effective as a simple: "You're right; I'm wrong. I'm sorry."

Bill.

P. S. On second thought, I do feel better to hear that an English teacher bothers to read this stuff. If my old high school English teacher knew about it, I'll bet she'd be torn between pride and incredulity.

ST. SWITHIN'S DAY, 1950

St. Swithin musta been a guy . . . To know so much about the sky . . . That he could fain prognosticate . . . What happens if it rains that date.

I watched the sky, as it did pour . . . Then thought of "40 days or more" . . . I guess I'd best prepare to soak . . . As Griffith's Nats go slowly broke.

P. O. MacBride.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Jess Veihmeyer of 307 34th pl. ne. is somewhat puzzled by this bit of conversation he overheard between his daughter and her boy friend:

She: That guy's jokes really slay me. I nearly died laughing.

He: Yep, he sure was the life of the party.

Korean Move An Example Of Unity

(Ed. Note—Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter to his 17-year-old stepson on some of the ideals we are trying to champion in Korea.)

By Drew Pearson

Washington,
July 17, 1950.

Dear Son,

It is a wet, rainy midnight and I can't sleep. So I am in the office at my typewriter, with the kittens trying to crawl up my pajama leg. It isn't the rain that keeps me awake, but some of the problems facing the world, and the fact that you and a lot of other boys may soon have to go off to a strange and distant battlefront called Korea.

Pearson

So I have been wondering how you, who will soon celebrate your 18th birthday, and a lot of other boys around that age must feel when you have to grow up, go to school and plan your lives with a sword literally hanging over your head.

I know a little bit about this, because I was in college when we entered World War I. That, however, was the first war America had fought in a long time, and to most of us it was a glorious and exciting adventure.

However, the boys of your generation are a lot more sophisticated than we. And the country has now seen two great wars in quick succession, followed by a cold war which has broken out in a bloody, disastrous defeat in Korea. So all the glamour, the novelty, the excitement have worn off, and in a way I don't particularly blame the American lieutenant in Korea who said: "I never saw such a useless damned war in all my life."

A Time for Decision

I can well understand how this war, fought 8000 miles away in a strange land, in the defense of strange people, and against tremendous odds, can be considered useless. Yet, I don't think I'm a Pollyanna when I say that the year 1950 may go down in history just because of the Korean war—because it may stop war in the future and lead to a new era of world unity and peace.

There are some people abroad who call us "Uncle Sap." And there are some people here at home, like the Chicago Tribune crowd, who call us that, too; say we are impractical fools to be giving our money, our food, our steel, and now our life blood away to other people.

But there was a man named Jesus Christ who, in effect, was also called Uncle Sap. He, too, was branded an impractical visionary; yet his teachings have formed a goal toward which mankind has been struggling ever since. And I don't think I'm too optimistic when I say that our country, with the Marshall Plan and all the other help we have given our neighbors, may have come nearer a practical fulfillment of the Sermon on the Mount than at any time since Christ taught that great doctrine 2000 years ago.

As you know, I am considered quite a critical newspaperman. I do not hesitate to point out the faults of our Government and our country, but, despite all these faults, I very deeply feel that our country has just about reached a peak of idealism and unselfishness and power for good never before seen in the world.

We have reached it, but we can lose it.

We 'Needed' Korea

In fact, some of us were beginning to think more about our stomachs, our dividends, wages and prices, or how many automobiles we had or our neighbors had—than we did about the problem of peace.

So perhaps some of us needed Korea. We needed it to keep us from getting too soft, too selfish, too materialistic. But, above all, we needed it to set an example of world unity against an aggressor.

I think what you boys who are just approaching military age must remember is that the Korean decision had to come sooner or later. A nation cannot live alongside another nation which constantly threatens war. And a free world cannot exist with one nation bullying, arming, threatening to invade any peoples who do not bow to their political creed.

So, since this clash of free nations and the police-state nations was inescapable, it is better to get it over with and in such a way that we can build a new international police force, unhampered by vetoes, which will guarantee lasting peace.

This Time We Moved

Maybe you remember my telling you about some of the international conferences I have covered as a newspapermen where I could literally see the seeds of war planted—see them with my own eyes, and watch them grow and incubate, with the rest of the world watching, too, but powerless to stop the impending crisis.

Well, this time we have not been powerless. We saw the impending crisis and we moved to avert it.

I think it's important for you and the other boys approaching military age to remember this; also to remember that no country in the world today has our unselfishness, our courage, our idealism. And we've got to keep it that way.

So this Korean war, distant as it is, tough as it is, unwelcome as it is, may be the great turning point in the year 1950—midway through the century—when we can establish a world police force and a world authority to put down all wars in the future.

Those are some of the great things which the boys of your generation can look forward to. You are a lot smarter than my generation, and you can succeed where we failed.

Love from The Old Man.
